(A) has developed economically to the point where it no longer qualifies for bilateral foreign assistance programs from the United States because its per capita income level exceeds the eligibility requirements of such programs; or

(B) has never qualified for bilateral foreign assistance programs from the United States, but an ongoing relationship between the country and the United States, including technical assistance and training, would provide mutual benefits to that country and the United States.

(c) PURPOSE OF THE FELLOWSHIPS.—Fellowships under this section shall be provided in order to allow the recipients to gain knowledge and skills that will—

(1) providing technical and financial assistance to producers, marketers, and exporters in the design and construction of alternatives (such as freight containers which could be carried aboard flatbed trucks, flatbed rail cars, river barges, and oceangoing container vessels) to covered rail hopper cars for the purpose of transporting bulk commodities to appropriate terminal market facilities; and

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds that—

(1) the European Community has established a system, as part of its Europe 1992 economic integration plan, to set product standards and requirements, including those related to agricultural commodities and products thereof, and that system has not been transparent insofar as the European Community has refused reasonable requests to allow United States Government or industry experts to observe meetings of European standards-setting institutions;

(2) the European Community is also currently writing the rules by which United States exporters of agricultural commodities and products thereof will be able to show compliance with European Community product standards and requirements, and has refused to guarantee that such United States exporters will be able to show compliance with European Community product standards and requirements by using United States laboratories or through self-certification;

(3) the United States maintains an open, transparent system to set standards and requirements for agricultural commodities and products thereof, and many reciprocal arrangements currently in place allow European Community exporters of agricultural commodities and products thereof to show compliance with United States product standards and requirements by using European Community laboratories or through self-certification;

(4) the value of United States exports of agricultural commodities and products thereof to the European Community in 1989 was $6,600,000,000, constituting 17 percent of all United States exports of agricultural commodities and products thereof; and

(5) the product standards and testing policies of the European Community are consequently unfair and discriminatory, and have great potential to reduce significantly exports from the United States of agricultural commodities and products thereof.

(b) STATEMENTS OF POLICY.—

(1) The Congress denounces the European Community's nontransparent process of setting standards and requirements for agricultural commodities and products thereof, and the Congress further denounces the refusal by the European Community to guarantee that United States exporters of such commodities and products will be able to show compliance with European Community standards and requirements by using United States laboratories or through self-certification.

(2) The Congress deplores the adverse consequences of the standards and testing policies of the European Community on the bilateral agricultural trade relationship between the United States and the European Community.

(3) The Congress urges the President to use all available means to bring about significant and far-reaching changes in the standards and testing policies of the European Community in order to protect and maintain United States access to the European Community market for agricultural commodities and products thereof.

"(iii) to the extent not in conflict with requirements of the country of use, the pesticide is not packaged, and stored in conformity with standards for composition and quality of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations.

"(C) No pesticide described in subparagraph (A) may be exported unless, prior to shipment of such pesticide, the exporter provides to the Administrator—

SEC. 1302. FINDINGS OF THE NATIONAL AGRICULTURAL RESEARCH, EXTENSION, AND TEACHING POLICY ACT OF 1977.

Section 1402 of the National Agricultural Research, Extension, and Teaching Policy Act of 1977 (7 U.S.C. 3101) is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 1402. FINDINGS.

"Congress finds the following:

"(1) The Federal Government has provided funding support for agricultural research and extension for many years in order to promote and protect the general health and welfare of the people of the United States, and this support has significantly contributed to the development of the Nation's agricultural system.

"(2) The existing agricultural research system consisting of the Federal Government, the land-grant colleges and universities, other colleges and universities engaged in agricultural research, the agricultural experiment stations, and the private sector constitutes an essential national resource that must serve as the foundation for any further strengthening of agricultural research in the United States.

"(3) The agencies conducting federally supported research were established at different times in response to different and specific needs and their work is neither fully coordinated among these agencies nor with the non-Federal agricultural research activities.

"(4) Long-range planning for research, extension, and teaching is a key element in meeting the objectives of this title; accordingly, all of the elements in the food and agricultural science and education system are encouraged to expand their planning and coordination efforts.

"(5) These agencies have only been partially successful in responding to the needs of all persons affected by their research, and useful information produced through such federally supported research is not being efficiently transferred to the people of the United States.

"(6) The agricultural system in the United States is increasingly dependent on science and technology and requires a constant source of food and agricultural scientific expertise to maintain this dynamic system.

"(7) Expanded agricultural research and extension are needed to meet the rising demand for food and fiber products caused by increases in worldwide population, market forces, and food shortages.

"(8) Advances in food and agricultural sciences and technology have become increasingly limited by the periodic imbalances between the thorough development and exploitation of currently known scientific principles and technological approaches and concentration upon more fundamental research, requiring a continuing review and balancing of research emphases.

"(9) Federal funding levels for agricultural research and extension in recent years have not always been commensurate with needs stemming from changes in United States agricultural practices and the world food and agricultural situation.

"(10) It has been, and continues to be, the policy of the United States to support food and agricultural research, extension, and teaching in the broadest sense of these terms. The partnership between the Federal Government and the States (as consummated in legislation and cooperative agreements and in efforts to implement this policy in cooperation with the food and agricultural industry) has provided the United States with the most productive and efficient food and agricultural system in the world. This system is the basis of our national affluence and provides vast amounts of food and fiber to people in other countries. The food and agricultural system is dynamic and constantly changing, however, and research, extension, and teaching programs must be maintained and constantly adjusted to meet new challenges and opportunities. National support of cooperative research, extension, and teaching efforts must be reaffirmed and strengthened to meet major societal needs and scientific opportunities. Efforts in the food and agricultural sciences are needed in the following areas:

"(A) PLANT SYSTEMS.—Special emphases are needed on plant genome structure and function; molecular and cellular genetics and plant and microbial biotechnology; plant-pest interactions and biocontrol systems; crop plant response to environmental stresses; improved nutrient qualities of plant products; new food, feed, fiber, and industrial uses of plant products; and development of new crops, best management practices, integrated crop management, and other cropping systems.

"(B) ANIMAL SYSTEMS.—Special emphases are needed on cellular, molecular, physiological, and behavioral basis of animal reproduction, growth, disease, and health; identification of genes responsible for improved production traits and resistance to disease, improved nutritional performance of animals; improved nutrient qualities and safety of animal products and development of new animal products; enhanced animal production practices and technologies; animal husbandry and well-being; and animal systems applicable to aquaculture.

"(C) NUTRITION, FOOD QUALITY, AND HEALTH AND WELFARE.—Special emphases are needed on microbial contaminants and toxic contaminants and residues related to human health; links between diet and health, including monitoring the nutritional status of the population, especially critical subpopulations; nutrition education; rural family welfare; home economics; bioavailability of nutrients, postharvest physiology and practices; and improved processing technologies.

"(D) NATURAL RESOURCES AND THE ENVIRONMENT.—Special emphases are needed on fundamental structures and functions of ecosystems; biological and physical bases of integrated production systems; minimizing soil losses and degradation, sustaining surface and ground water quality, and maximizing water availability through conservation; forest and range management and productivity; weather and climatic effects on agriculture.

"(E) ENGINEERING, PRODUCTS, AND PROCESSES.—Special emphases are needed on new uses and new products from crops, animals, byproducts, waste products and natural resources; robotics, computing, and expert systems; information and communications technologies and systems; energy efficiency, conservation, and the development of alternative, renewable energy sources; new hazard and risk assessment and mitigation measures; and natural resource and environmental quality and management.

(2) extreme weather conditions, such as drought, appear to be occurring more frequently, and further climate changes are likely;

(3) the Federal Government has repeatedly assumed responsibility for emergency aid to agricultural producers who suffer losses due to weather;

(4) it would be prudent and cost effective to prevent or reduce agricultural losses due to weather factors through better use of weather and climate information;

(5) current agricultural weather and climate information and its delivery to agricultural producers are not adequate; and

(6) better application of weather and climate information will help conserve water resources, allow agricultural chemicals to be applied in a more efficient fashion with less stress on the environment, and reduce energy consumption by improved management decisionmaking.

(c) PURPOSES.—The purposes of this subtitle are to—

(1) provide a nationally coordinated agricultural weather information system, based on the participation of universities, State programs, Federal agencies, and the private weather consulting sector, and aimed at meeting the weather and climate information needs of agricultural producers;

The sources of possible concern begin with production and include processing, transportation, storage, and marketing of food supplies.

(2) The Department of Agriculture is responsible for research and education that supports the development and use by the Department of new knowledge and technology aimed at reducing the real and perceived concerns about food safety by quantitatively evaluating risk, defining new methods for detection and prevention of factors that compromise agricultural product quality, assessing consumer attitudes and preferences, and assuring the timely transfer and adoption of new technology.

(3) Current research and extension programs of the Department have been enhanced to address these concerns, but there remains a need for an expanded effort that should be undertaken in the immediate future.

SEC. 1405. PILOT PROGRAM ON LABELING OF PERISHABLE AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTS.

(a) PILOT PROGRAM.—The Secretary of Agriculture shall implement a 2-year pilot program during which time perishable agricultural products are labeled or marked as to their country of origin. This 2-year program will be conducted nationwide. After the 2-year period, the Secretary will conduct a study to determine the results of the 2-year pilot country of origin labeling program. The Secretary shall submit to the Congress the results of the study within 18 months from the date of completion of the pilot program.

(b) DETAILS OF THE 2-YEAR PILOT PROGRAM.—(1) The labeling program requires that the country of origin on perishable produce is indicated on any such commodity or on the package, display, holding unit, or bin with a label, stamp, mark, placard or other clear and visible indication at the point of sale by any commission merchant, dealer, broker, or grocer. A sign alongside the produce is acceptable for country of origin labeling.

(2) The labeling program applies to imported and domestic perishable agricultural products.

(3) The labeling program applies to those imported perishable agricultural products which enter this country marked as to country of origin and are thus in compliance with section 304(a) of the Tariff Act of 1930.

(4) Exemptions to this labeling law may be made for imported perishable agricultural products which enter this country unpackaged, without any type of container and are thus exempted from country of origin labeling by virtue of the J-list of the Tariff Act of 1930.

SEC. 1413. WINE AND WINEGRAPE INDUSTRY STUDY.

(a) STUDY.—The Secretary of Agriculture shall conduct a study to determine how the Department of Agriculture might best work with and support the United States wine and winegrape industry. Such study shall—

(1) be designed to determine whether existing Department of Agriculture programs could be improved to better assist and support the United States wine and winegrape industry;

(2) be designed to determine whether new methods or programs implemented by the Department of Agriculture could enhance wine and winegrape production and processing and expand markets for United States wine and winegrapes;

(3) be conducted in consultation with local, State, and national associations or organizations of wine and winegrape producers;

(4) give special emphasis to States or other geographic areas that have not traditionally had a wine and winegrape industry.

(b) REPORT.—The Secretary of Agriculture shall submit a report detailing the determinations made in the study under subsection (a) to the Committee on Agriculture of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry of the Senate not later than December 31, 1991. Such report shall also include any recommendations to the Congress for legislation the Secretary determines may be necessary to implement the programs or methods specified under subsection (a).

SEC. 1414. PRODUCER RESEARCH AND PROMOTION BOARD ACCOUNTABILITY.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds that—

(1) United States agricultural producers and importers contribute approximately $600 million annually to support agricultural promotion and research, and consumer information relating to food and nutrition, under federally-authorized checkoff programs;

(2) these federally-authorized checkoff programs are self-help efforts that enable the industry members that contribute to these checkoff programs to take an active role in enhancing the marketing of their farm products;

(3) the federally-authorized checkoff programs, while relatively new, have substantially contributed to strengthening markets for the agricultural products covered by the programs;

(4) the authorizing legislation for these agricultural check-off programs provides for the Secretary of Agriculture to appoint boards or councils comprised of producers and importers to assist the Secretary in administering the programs under the Secretary's oversight;

(5) the boards and councils that participate in administering the federally-authorized checkoff programs, in each instance, have important responsibilities under, and make substantial contributions to the effective management of, the programs while serving as a valuable link between the industry members that are funding the promotion, research, and information activities under the programs and the Department of Agriculture;

(6) the producers and importers that pay assessments to support the programs must have confidence in, and strongly support, the checkoff programs if these programs are to continue to succeed; and

(7) the checkoff programs cannot operate efficiently and effectively, nor can producer confidence and support for these programs be maintained, unless the boards and councils faithfully and diligently perform the functions assigned to them under the authorizing legislation.

(b) SENSE OF THE CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that, to ensure the continued success of the federally-authorized checkoff programs, boards or councils that participate in the administration of the checkoff programs should take care to faithfully and diligently perform the functions assigned to them under the authorizing legislation and otherwise meet their crucial program responsibilities. It further is the sense of Congress that each of these boards and councils, in carrying out the responsibilities assigned to it, is accountable to the Secretary of Agriculture, Congress, and the industry contributing funds for the checkoff program involved, and that each currently operational checkoff board or council should review its charter and activities to ensure that its responsibilities and duties have not been inappropriately delegated or otherwise relinquished to another organization.

"SEC. 2. FINDINGS, PURPOSE, AND POLICY.

"(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds that—

"(1) most of the productive forest land of the United States is in private, State, and local governmental ownership, and the capacity of the United States to produce renewable forest resources is significantly dependent on such non-Federal forest lands;

"(2) adequate supplies of timber and other forest resources are essential to the Nation and are dependent on proper forest management and efficient methods for establishing, managing, and harvesting trees and processing, marketing, and using wood and wood products;

"(3) nearly one-half of the wood supply of the Nation comes from non-industrial private timberlands and such percentage could rise with expanded assistance programs;

"(4) non-industrial private forest lands provide important habitats for fish and wildlife, as well as aesthetics, outdoor recreation opportunities, and other goods and services;

"(5) the soil, water, air quality, and aesthetics of the Nation can be maintained and improved through good stewardship of privately held forest resources;

"(6) insects and diseases affecting trees occur and sometimes create emergency conditions on all land, whether Federal or non-Federal, and efforts to prevent and control such insects and diseases often require coordinated action by both Federal and non-Federal land managers;

"(7) fires in rural areas threaten human lives, property, and forests and other resources, and Federal-State cooperation in forest fire protection has proven effective and valuable;

"(8) the products and services resulting from non-industrial private forest land stewardship provide income and employment that contributes to the economic health and diversity of rural communities;

"(9) stewardship of privately held forest resources requires a long-term commitment that can only be fostered through local, State, and Federal governmental actions; and

"(10) the Department of Agriculture, through the coordinated efforts of the Agriculture Research Service, Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation Service, Cooperative State Research Service, Extension Service, Forest Service, and Soil Conservation Service, cooperating with other Federal agencies, and State foresters and others, has the expertise and experience to assist private landowners in achieving individual goals and public benefits.

"(b) PURPOSE.—It is the purpose of this Act to authorize the Secretary of Agriculture (hereafter in this Act referred to as the 'Secretary'), with respect to non-Federal forest lands, to assist in—

"(1) the establishment of a coordinated and cooperative Federal, State, and local forest resources stewardship program to promote the multiple-use management of the non-Federal forest lands of the United States;

"(2) the encouragement of the production of timber;

"(3) the prevention and control of insects and diseases affecting trees and forests;

"(4) the prevention and control of rural fires;

"(5) the efficient utilization of wood and wood residues, including the recycling of wood fiber;

"(6) the improvement and maintenance of fish and wildlife habitat;

"(7) the planning and implementation of urban forestry programs; and

"(8) the strengthening of educational, technical and financial assistance programs that provide assistance to non-Federal forest land owners.

"(c) POLICY.—It is the policy of Congress that it is in the national interest for the Secretary to work in cooperation with State foresters or equivalent State officials and the private sector in implementing Federal programs affecting non-Federal forest lands.

"(d) CONSTRUCTION.—This Act shall be construed to complement the policies and direction under the Forest and Rangeland Renewable Resources Planning Act of 1974 (16 U.S.C. 1600 et seq.).".

(b) RURAL FORESTRY ASSISTANCE.— Section 3 of the Act (16 U.S.C. 2102) is amended to read as follows:

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary, in consultation with the appropriate Federal, State and local agencies, and the private sector shall establish and implement expanded programs that provide educational and technical assistance to meet the goals of this Act.

"(b) ASSISTANCE TO STATE OFFICIALS.—The Secretary may provide financial, technical, educational, and related assistance to State foresters, State extension directors, and equivalent State officials to enable such officials to provide technical information, advice, and related assistance to private forest land owners and managers, vendors, forest resource operators, forest resource professionals, public agencies and individuals to enable such persons to carry out activities that are consistent with the purposes of this Act, including—

"(1) protecting, maintaining, enhancing, and preserving forest lands and the multiple values and uses that depend on such lands;

"(2) identifying, protecting, maintaining, enhancing and preserving wildlife and fish species and their habitats;

"(3) implementing the latest forest management technologies;

"(4) selecting, producing, and marketing alternative forest crops, products and services from forest lands;

"(5) protecting forest land from damage caused by fire, insects, disease, and damaging weather;

"(6) managing the rural-land and urban-land interface to balance the use of forest resources in and adjacent to urban and community areas;

SEC. 1511. BLUE MOUNTAIN NATURAL RESOURCE INSTITUTE.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds that—

(1) the forests and rangelands in the States of Washington and Oregon east of the Cascade Crest do not yield their productive capacity of multiple products, services and benefits, yet these forests and rangelands are expected to yield more;

(2) these forests are among the most insect and disease infected in North America due to early management practices, including the exclusion of fire and past management treatments, which have allowed these forests to become overstocked or to succeed to pest-susceptible forest types;

(3) forage productivity of these forests and rangelands is reduced due to the spread of nonactive grasses, juniper, and noxious weeds;

(4) the unprecedented build-up of fuel loads in these forests places them under continual threat of catastrophic fire;

(5) losses due to insects, disease, and fire and reduced productivity of these forests and rangelands have far-reaching environmental and economic consequences to local communities and a region entirely dependent on land-based resources; and

(6) concerns over global climate change, water quality and quantity, air quality, fish and wildlife habitat, biodiversity, long-term forest and rangeland health and productivity, welfare of resource-dependent communities and regional economies, catastrophic fire, and scenic quality of landscapes set the dimensions of multi-faceted resources issued which are straining the effectiveness of policy makers and land managers.

(b) ESTABLISHMENT OF RESEARCH AND DEMONSTRATION PROGRAM.—The Secretary of Agriculture shall establish a research, development, and application program for the forests and rangelands of the States of Oregon and Washington located east of the Cascade Crest. The Blue Mountain Natural Resource Institute, headquartered in La Grande, Oregon, shall address research, development, and application needs of the Blue Mountain area in Washington and Oregon and shall plan and initiate the larger program. The program, through research, technology development and application, and public involvement, shall—

(1) compile and develop basic biological and ecological information to improve forest and rangeland health and vigor;

(2) focus research on joint management and production of timber, wildlife, grazing, fish, water quality, and recreation;

(3) stimulate cooperative research between universities and other Federal and State agencies;

(4) identify and evaluate opportunities to enhance the long-term economic and social benefits derived from the region's forest and rangeland resources in concert with county and regional economic strategies;

(5) convert results of research into technology development products and apply new information in a timely manner;

(6) develop technology to guide intensive multi-resource management and policy decisions for sustaining long-term productivity and ecological values into the early decades of the 21st century;

(7) develop new technologies that will enable forest and range managers to maximize multi-resource benefits and minimize the hazards of fire, insect, and disease outbreaks;

(8) develop forest management practices for use by land managers and landowners that are appropriate at the wildland-urban interface and in concert with public values for these areas;

(9) demonstrate the application of technology and resource knowledge on specific management areas; and

(10) establish mutually beneficial relations with the public to inform them regarding research and technology development and new management directions and to obtain feedback.

(c) PARTNERSHIP.—The Secretary shall establish and carry out the program under subsection (b) in consultation and cooperation with Federal, State, and local agencies, universities, and the private sector. In addition, the Secretary shall establish an advisory committee representing broad interests and perspectives to assist in the formulation of plans for implementing the program.

SEC. 1512. INTERNATIONAL FOREST RESOURCES INSTITUTE.

(a) The Secretary shall establish an International Forest Resources Institute (hereafter referred to as the "Institute"), to be operated by the State University of New York College of Environmental Science and Forestry.

(b) The mission of the Institute will be to increase the competitive position of the forest industries of the northeastern United States as major producers of international forest products in order to increase domestic employment, stimulate rural development, and to provide a knowledgeable, objective analysis of global forest resource problems.

(c) The Institute will be comprised of the State University of New York College of Environmental Science and Forestry.

(d) The Institute shall—

(1) emphasize application of existing knowledge to the manufacturing and international marketing of forest products as well as conduct new research related to the competitiveness of the northeastern forest products industry;

(2) study and evaluate domestic and international forest, forest sector, agroforestry, development, economic, and trade policies;

(3) design, analyze and test technologically appropriate manufacturing, processing and marketing systems which are supportive of and consistent with forest policy and management strategies formulated by the Institute and which enhance opportunities for markets in forest products;

(4) formulate and test management strategies for United States forests and for manufacturing facilities that promote rational use, and long term maintenance, of globally important forests; and

(5) design and analyze specific policies for critically important forests in the world with respect to forest sector, agricultural, developmental, and economic policies (giving particular attention to mechanisms to coordinate policy development between countries with significant forest resources).

(e) There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out the purposes of this section.

"(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds that—

"(1) the protection of ground water and surface water is essential for the health and well-being of rural America;

"(2) agricultural non-point and point source pollution has been identified by States as contributing to surface and ground water degradation in the United States;

"(3) the agricultural community desires to protect surface and ground water against pollution;

"(4) many existing farming practices and systems have the potential for preventing such pollution by minimizing pollutants at the source while maintaining agricultural productivity and profitability;

"(5) these farming practices and systems usually constitute the most cost-effective and environmentally-sound approach to protecting and enhancing water quality and the environment as affected by agriculture; and

"(6) State and Federal environmental laws increasingly give priority to pollution prevention to protect the environment, natural resources including wildlife, and human health.

"(b) STATEMENT OF POLICY.—The policy of Congress is that water quality protection, including source reduction of agricultural pollutants, henceforth shall be an important goal of the programs and policies of the Department of Agriculture. Furthermore, agricultural producers in environmentally sensitive areas should request assistance to develop and implement on-farm water quality protection plans in order to assist in compliance with State and Federal environmental laws and to enhance the environment.

"SEC. 1272. DEFINITIONS.

"As used in this subtitle—

"(1) AGRICULTURAL WATER QUALITY PROTECTION PRACTICE.—The term 'agricultural water quality protection practice' means a farm-level practice or a system of practices designed to protect water quality by mitigating or reducing the release of agricultural pollutants, including nutrients, pesticides, animal waste, sediment, salts, biological contaminants, and other materials, into the environment.

"(3) DUTIES OF OWNERS AND OPERATORS.—In order to receive annual incentive payments, an owner or operator of a farm must agree—

"(A) to implement a water quality protection plan approved by the Secretary subject to the agreement established under this subtitle;

"(B) not to conduct any practice on the farm specified in the approved water quality protection plan as a practice that would tend to defeat the purposes of this subtitle;

"(C) to comply with such additional provisions as the Secretary determines are desirable and are included in the agreement to carry out the water quality protection plan or to facilitate the practical administration of the program;

"(D) on the violation of a term or condition of the agreement at any time the owner or operator has control of the land to refund any incentive or cost share payment received with interest and forfeit any future such payments as determined by the Secretary; and

"(E) on the transfer of the right and interest of the owner or operator in land subject to the agreement, unless the transferee of such agrees with the Secretary to assume all obligations of the agreement, to refund any such cost-share and incentive payments received under this subtitle, as determined by the Secretary.

"(4) WETLAND OR WILDLIFE HABITAT OPTIONS.—(A) COST SHARE ASSISTANCE.—Owners and operators who voluntarily agree to develop and implement agricultural production practices, in concert with their water quality protection plan, that preserve and enhance wetland or wildlife habitat, shall also be eligible to receive cost-share assistance for the implementation of such practices. "(b) ELIGIBLE LAND.—(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary may acquire easements under this section on land placed in the conservation reserve under subtitle D (other than such land that is likely to continue to remain out of production and that does not pose an off-farm environmental threat), land under the Water Bank Act (16 U.S.C. 1301), or other cropland that—

"(A) is farmed wetland;

"(B) is adjacent to wetland that is functionally dependent on such cropland;

"(C) is converted wetland converted prior to December 23, 1985, the restoration of which is deemed important by the Secretary for the protection of water quality or wildlife;

"(D) contains riparian corridors that provide a link between wetland or that is adjacent to waterways, streams, or other water bodies;

"(E) is an area of critical habitat for wildlife, especially threatened or endangered species; or

"(F) contains other environmentally sensitive areas, as determined by the Secretary, that would prevent a producer from complying with other Federal, State, or local environmental goals if commodities were to be produced on such land.

"(2) INELIGIBLE LAND.—The Secretary may not acquire easements on—

"(A) land that contains timber stands established under the conservation reserve under subtitle D; or

"(B) pasture land established to trees under the conservation reserve under subtitle D.

"(d) NATIONAL AGRICULTURAL WETLAND RESERVE.—(1) ESTABLISHMENT.—The Secretary shall establish as a component of the easement program established under this section a national agricultural wetland reserve.

"(2) ENROLLMENT.—The Secretary shall seek to enroll 2,500,000 acres of wetland and associated areas in the national agricultural wetland reserve during fiscal years 1991 through 1995.

"(E) to limit the production of any agricultural commodity on such lands only to production for the benefit of wildlife;

"(F) not to conduct any harvesting or grazing, nor otherwise make commercial use of the forage, on land that is subject to the easement unless specifically provided for in the easement or related agreement, nor adopt any similar practice specified in the easement or related agreement that would tend to defeat the purposes of this subtitle, as determined by the Secretary;

SEC. 1611. INTEGRATED FARM MANAGEMENT PROGRAM OPTION.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—The Secretary of Agriculture (hereafter in this section referred to as the "Secretary") shall, by regulation, establish a voluntary program, to be known as the "Integrated Farm Management Program Option" (hereafter referred to in this section as the "program"), designed to assist producers of agricultural commodities in adopting integrated, multiyear, site-specific farm management plans by reducing farm program barriers to resource stewardship practices and systems. Participants in the program under this section may plant base acres of one program commodity to a crop of another program commodity and maintain base acreage, but not receive payments unless such planted commodity is part of a resource-conserving crop.

(b) DEFINITIONS.—(1) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of this section—

(A) The term "resource-conserving crop" means legumes, legume-grass mixtures, legume-small grain mixtures, legume-grass-small grain mixtures, and alternative crops.

(B) The term "resource-conserving crop rotation" means a crop rotation that includes at least one resource-conserving crop and that reduces erosion, maintains or improves soil fertility and tilth, interrupts pest cycles, or conserves water.

(C) The term "farming operations and practices" includes the integration of crops and crop-plant variety selection, rotation practices, tillage systems, soil conserving and soil building practices, nutrient management strategies, biological control and integrated pest management strategies, livestock production and management systems, animal waste management systems, water and energy conservation measures, and health and safety considerations.

(D) The term "integrated farm management plan" means a comprehensive, multiyear, site-specific plan that meets the requirements of subsection (e).

(2) CROPS.—For purposes of paragraph (1)(A)—

(A) The term "grass" means perennial grasses commonly used for haying or grazing.

(B) The term "legume" means forage legumes (such as alfalfa or clover) or any legume grown for use as a forage or green manure, but not including any bean crop from which the seeds are harvested.

(C) The term "small grain" shall not include malting barley or wheat, except for wheat interplanted with other small grain crops for nonhuman consumption.

(D) The term "alternative crops" means experimental and industrial crops grown in arid and semi-arid regions that conserve soil and water.

(c) ELIGIBILITY.—To be eligible to participate in the program established by this section, a producer must—

(1) prepare and submit to the Secretary for approval an integrated farm management plan (hereafter referred to in this section as the "plan");

(2) comply with the terms and conditions of the plan, as approved by the Secretary; and

(3) keep such records as the Secretary may require.

(d) CONTRACTS.—The Secretary shall enter into contracts with producers to enroll acreage in the program. Such contracts shall be for a period of not less than 3 years, but may, at the producer's option, be for a longer period of time up to 10 years.

(e) REQUIREMENTS OF THE PLANS.—Each plan approved by the Secretary shall—

(1) specify the acreage to be enrolled in the program;

(2) describe the resource-conserving crop rotation to be implemented and maintained on such acreage during the contract period to fulfill the purposes of the program;

(3) contain a schedule for the implementation, improvement and maintenance of the resource-conserving crop rotation described in the plan;

(4) describe the farming operations and practices to be implemented on such acreage and how such operations and practices could reasonably be expected to result in—

(A) the maintenance or enhancement of the overall productivity and profitability of the farm;

(B) the prevention of the degradation of farmland soils, the long-term improvement of the fertility and physical properties of such soils; and

(C) the protection of water supplies from contamination by managing or minimizing agricultural pollutants if their management or minimization results in positive economic and environmental benefits;

(4) comply with all Federal, State, and local requirements designed to protect soil, wetland, wildlife habitat, and the quality of groundwater and surface water; and

(5) contain such other terms as the Secretary may, by regulation, require.

(f) ADMINISTRATION; CERTIFICATION; TERMINATION.—(1) ADMINISTRATION; TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE; FLEXIBILITY; IMPLEMENTATION; DISPLACEMENT.—(A) The program shall be administered by the Secretary.

(B) In administering the program, the Secretary, in consultation with the local conservation districts, and the local conservation committee, shall provide technical assistance to producers in developing and implementing plans, evaluating the effectiveness of plans, and assessing the costs and benefits of farming operations and practices. The plans may draw on handbooks and technical guides and may also include other practices appropriate to the particular circumstances of the producer and the purposes of the program.

(C) In administering the program, the Secretary shall provide sufficient flexibility for a producer to adjust or modify the producer's plan to respond to changes in technology and farm and market conditions. Any such adjustments or modifications shall be consistent with the purposes of the program and approved by the Secretary.

(D)(i) Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, the Secretary shall implement this section in such a manner as to minimize any adverse economic effect on the agribusinesses and other agriculturally related economic interests within any county, State, or region that may result from a decrease of harvested acres due to the operation of this section. In carrying out this section, the Secretary may restrict the total amount of crop acreage that may be removed from production, taking into consideration the total amount of crop acreage that has, or will be, removed from production under other price support, production adjustment, or conservation program activities.

(ii) The Secretary shall, to the greatest extent practicable, permit producers on a farm that desire to participate in the program authorized under this section to enroll acreage adequate to maximize conservation goals on such farm and ensure economic effectiveness of the program in each individual application.

(E)(i) Any enrollment in this program of land on a farm that results in an average decrease of harvested acres on such farm in excess of 25 percent over the life of such plan as compared to current operations shall be deemed as Conservation Reserve Program acres for the purpose of applying the county limit on acres placed in the reserve.

(ii) To the extent practicable, the Secretary shall not enroll any acreage under this program to the extent that the average amount of cropland removed from production in any county under the plan developed for such acreage over the life of such plan plus the total amount of cropland removed from production in such county under—

(I) the Conservation Reserve Program authorized under section 1231 of the Food Security Act of 1985 (hereafter referred to as the "Conservation Reserve Program"); and would exceed 25 percent of the total commercial cropland in any such county.

(II) a program authorized under section 101B(c)(1)(B), section 103B(c)(1)(B), section 105A(c)(1)(B), or section 107A(c)(1)(B) of the Agricultural Act of 1949 (7 U.S.C. 1441 et seq.) (hereafter in this section referred to as the "Act")

(F) The Secretary shall not approve any plan that will result in the involuntary displacement of farm tenants or lessees by landowners through the removal of substantial portions of the farm from production of a commodity. In the case of any tenant or lessee who has rented or leased the farm (with or without a written option for annual renewal or periodic renewals) for a period of two or more of the immediately preceding years, the Secretary shall consider the refusal by a landlord, without reasonable cause other than simply for the purpose of enrollment in the program, to renew such rental or lease as an involuntary displacement in the absence of a written consent to such nonrenewal by the tenant or lessee.

(2) CERTIFICATION.—The Secretary shall certify compliance by producers with the terms and conditions of the plans.

(3) TERMINATION.—The Secretary may terminate a contract entered into with a producer under this program if—

(A) the producer agrees to such termination, or

(B) the producer violates the terms and conditions of such contract.

(g) PROGRAM RULES.—(1) BASE, YIELD AND PAYMENT PROTECTION.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Secretary shall not, except as provided in paragraph (3), reduce crop acreage bases, farm program payment yields, or farm program payments of participants in the program as a result of their planting a resource-conserving crop as part of a resource-conserving crop rotation.

(2) ADJUSTMENTS IN ACREAGE REDUCTION REQUIREMENTS.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Secretary shall make fair and equitable adjustments in acreage limitation or set-aside requirements applicable to producers participating in the program giving due consideration to crop rotation, soil and water conservation practices, and other appropriate factors resulting from the implementation of plans. SEC. 1792. WELFARE SIMPLIFICATION AND COORDINATION ADVISORY COMMITTEE.

(a) APPOINTMENT AND MEMBERSHIP.—There is hereby established an Advisory Committee on Welfare Simplification and Coordination (hereafter in this section referred to as the "Committee") consisting of no fewer than 9 and no more than 15 members appointed by the Secretary of Agriculture (hereafter in this section referred to as the "Secretary"), after consultation with the Secretaries of Health and Human Services and Housing and Urban Development, the Commissioner of Social Security, State and local officials responsible for administering the food stamp program, cash and medical assistance programs for low-income families and individuals under the Social Security Act, and programs providing housing assistance to needy families and individuals, and representatives of recipients and recipient advocacy organizations associated with such programs. The members of the Committee shall be persons who have experience in administering food stamp, cash, medical, and housing assistance programs at the Federal, State, and local levels, are familiar with the rules, goals, and limitations of such programs, and have demonstrated expertise in evaluating the operations of and interaction among such programs as they affect administrators and recipients, and shall include representatives of the administrators and recipients affected by such programs.

(b) PURPOSE.—It shall be the purpose of the Committee—

(1) to identify the policies implemented in the food stamp program, cash and medical assistance programs under the Social Security Act, and housing assistance programs (whether resulting from law, regulations, or administrative practice) that, because they differ, make it difficult for those eligible to apply for and obtain benefits from more than one program and restrict the ability of administrators of such programs to provide efficient, timely, and appropriate benefits to those eligible for more than one type of assistance;

(2) to examine the reasons for such different programs and policies and previous efforts to coordinate and simplify such programs and policies;

(3) to evaluate how and the extent to which such different programs and policies hinder the receipt of benefits from more than one program and limit administrators' ability to provide efficient, timely and appropriate benefits;

(4) to recommend common or simplified programs and policies (including recommendations for changes in law, regulations, and administrative practice and for policies that do not currently exist in such programs) that would reduce difficulties in applying for and obtaining benefits from more than one program and increase the ability of administrators of such programs to efficiently provide timely and appropriate assistance to those eligible for more than one type of assistance; and

(5) to describe the effects of such common or simplified programs and policies (including how such common or simplified programs and policies would enhance or conflict with the purposes of such programs, how they would ease the burdens on administrators and recipients, how they would affect program costs and participation, and the degree to which they would change Federal-State relationships in such programs), and the reasons for recommending such programs and policies (including reasons that might be sufficient to override the purposes of individual programs).

(c) ADMINISTRATIVE SUPPORT.—The Secretary shall provide the Committee with such technical and other assistance, including secretarial and clerical assistance, as may be required to carry out its functions.

(d) REIMBURSEMENT.—Members of the Committee shall serve without compensation but shall receive reimbursement for necessary travel and subsistence expenses incurred by them in the performance of the duties of the Committee.

(e) REPORTS.—The Committee shall submit a final report, including recommendations for common or simplified programs and policies and the effects of and reasons for such programs and policies, to the Congress and the Secretaries of Agriculture, Health and Human Services, and Housing and Urban Development not later than April 1, 1992, and may submit interim reports to the Congress and such Secretaries as deemed appropriate by the Committee.

(f) EXPIRATION.—The Committee shall expire upon submission of its final report, or at such later time as the Secretary of Agriculture determines appropriate to fulfill its advisory functions.

"(h) Of sums appropriated pursuant to this section, not more than $2,000,000 in any fiscal year may be used by the Secretary to make two-year competitive grants that will (1) enhance interagency cooperation in nutrition education activities and (2) develop cost effective ways to inform people eligible for food stamps about nutrition, resource management, and community nutrition education programs, such as the expanded food and nutrition education program. Awards will be made to one or more cooperative extension services, as defined in section 1404(5) of the National Agricultural Research, Extension, and Teaching Policy Act of 1977 (7 U.S.C. 3103(5)), in coordination with local or State agencies serving low income people. Each project shall include an evaluation component and shall develop an implementation plan for replication in other States. The Secretary shall report to the appropriate committees of Congress on the results of the projects and shall disseminate these results through the cooperative extension service system and to State welfare offices, local food stamp program offices, and other entities serving low income households.".

"(II) appropriate limits for cleanliness factors taking into consideration the technical ability and practicability of the commercial market to comply with such limits, the economic benefits and costs to the grain industry, and domestic and international demand.

"(ii) If the Administrator determines, after evaluating the results of the study required by clause (i), that establishing new or revised current factors relating to cleanliness would be in the best economic interest of United States agriculture, the Administrator shall establish or amend the standards to include economically and commercially practical levels of cleanliness for the grain. The Administrator shall make a determination under this clause no later than 2 years after enactment of this paragraph.

"(A) nongrain substances; and

"(B) grain that is unfit for the ordinary commercial purposes for which such grain is intended to be used (to the extent that its combination with grades No. 3 or better will preclude the resultant combination from meeting the performance levels expected of such grades and as is required by section 4(c)(1)).

(a) FINDING.—Congress finds that consumers, both internationally and domestically, are aware of, and concerned with, the purity of their food supply.

(b) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that in order to assure buyers of the purity of United States grain, the Federal Grain Inspection Service should, as soon as technically and economically practical, develop tests of mycotoxins and pesticide residues and make such tests available on such impurities in conjunction with official grain inspections established under the United States Grain Standards Act (7 U.S.C. 71 et seq.).

Section 110 of the Agricultural Act of 1949 (7 U.S.C. 1445e) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(k) In announcing the terms and conditions of the producer storage program under subsection (e)(1), the Secretary shall review standards concerning the quality of grain that shall be allowed to be stored under the program, and such standards should encourage only quality grain, as determined by the Secretary, to be pledged as collateral for such loans. The Secretary shall review inspection, maintenance, and stock rotation requirements and take the necessary steps to maintain the quality of such grain.".

In establishing such standards, the Secretary shall take into consideration factors related to the ability of grain to withstand storage and assurance of acceptable end-use performance.

"(b) INSPECTION OF GRAIN ACQUISITIONS.—The Commodity Credit Corporation shall utilize Federal Grain Inspection Service approved procedures to inspect and evaluate the condition of the grain it acquires from producers. In no case shall this section require the use of an official inspection unless the producer so requests.".

The Secretary shall analyze the variety surveys conducted, in conjunction with available applied research information on intrinsic quality attributes of the varieties, to evaluate general intrinsic crop quality characteristics and trends in production related to intrinsic quality characteristics. This information shall be disseminated as required by section 1815(b).

SEC. 1818. SENSE OF CONGRESS CONCERNING END-USE PERFORMANCE RESEARCH.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds that—

(1) research concerning the end-use performance of grain conducted by the Agricultural Research Service and land-grant universities is critical to improving the quality and competitiveness of United States grains in domestic and world markets;

(2) the work done by the Agricultural Research Service wheat quality laboratories has proven valuable to improving the understanding of individuals concerning the relationships between the physical and chemical properties of wheat and the performance of wheat in milling and baking; and

(3) research conducted by the Agricultural Research Service and at land-grant universities concerning the composition of corn and soybean varieties has proven valuable to feed and food users.

(b) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that the Secretary, and in particular the Agricultural Research Service and land-grant universities, should adjust their financial priorities to place increased emphasis on grain variety evaluation and the development of objective tests for the end-use properties of grains.

SEC. 1819. SENSE OF CONGRESS CONCERNING COOPERATION IN OBJECTIVE TESTING.

(a) FINDING.—Congress finds that the close cooperative relationship that exists between the Federal Grain Inspection Service, the Agricultural Research Service, and land-grant universities has proven highly beneficial in identifying grain quality-related characteristics, developing tests, and designing grain standards.

(b) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that the cooperative efforts described in subsection (a), including the sharing of funds and personnel, should be expanded, and that the Federal Grain Inspection Service should continue to utilize the research capabilities of the Agricultural Research Service and the land-grant universities.

The procedures shall be made available to country elevators and others making first-point-of-delivery inspections.

(c) To encourage the use of equipment and procedures developed under subsections (a) and (b), the Administrator of the Federal Grain Inspection Service shall provide for official inspection services by delegated and designated inspection agencies and provide information on the proper use of sampling and inspection equipment, application of the grain standards, and availability of official inspection services, including appeal inspection service, under the United States Grain Standards Act.

(2) that government's financial resources, and policy commitment, to take specific actions to ensure the development, research, control, and study of agricultural activities within that country.

(b) ASSISTANCE FOR COMMERCIAL DEBT EXCHANGES.—(1) GRANTS.—The Secretary is authorized to furnish assistance in the form of grants, on such terms and conditions as the Secretary determines to be necessary, to United States non-governmental organizations, colleges, and universities, for the purchase on the secondary market of discounted external commercial debt of a foreign government to be canceled under the terms of an agreement with that government as part of a debt for agricultural development exchange.

(2) INTEREST ON GRANTS.—The grantee (or any subgrantee) of the grants referred to in paragraph (1) may retain interest earned on the proceeds of any resulting debt for agricultural development exchange pending the disbursement of such funds for approved program purposes without deposit in the Treasury of the United States and without further appropriations by the Congress.

(3) REINVESTMENT OF INTEREST.—Such interest accrued in accordance with paragraph (2) shall be reinvested by the grantee in the approved project in the host country or used for the establishment of an endowment for the purpose for which the grant was provided to the grantee.

(3) The Secretary shall encourage as many countries as possible to propose such exchanges with the purpose of demonstrating to a large number of governments the feasibility and benefits of efficient and successful agricultural development.

(d) ELIGIBILITY.—Before awarding a grant under this section, the Secretary shall determine that—

(1) the grantee and the host country are committed to the long-term viability of the activity that is to be undertaken through the debt for agricultural development exchange;

(2) a plan has been prepared in advance by both the grantee and the host country, which, when implemented, will adequately provide for the viability of the activity that is to be undertaken through the debt for agricultural development exchange;

(3) there is a government agency or a local non-governmental organization, or combination thereof, in the host country with the capability, commitment, and record of agricultural development to oversee the long-term viability of the activity that is to be undertaken through the debt for agricultural development exchange; and

Subtitle C—Other Provisions

SEC. 1841. AGRICULTURAL PRODUCT PROMOTION AND ENHANCEMENT.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds that—

(1) United States agricultural producers and importers contribute approximately $600,000,000 annually to commodity promotion and research programs to maintain and expand markets for their products;

(2) these commodity checkoff programs are funded entirely by producers and importers in a self-help effort to enhance the economic viability of their industries;

(3) these commodity checkoff programs are intended to enhance efforts to market agricultural products, rather than to facilitate advances in production that do not directly relate to strengthening markets of the products;

(4) marketing conditions for agricultural products are dramatically affected by consumer perceptions relating to environmental issues, food safety concerns, animal husbandry practices, and other similar issues; and

(5) advances of technology continue to provide new uses for agricultural products, both in food and nonfood applications, and such new uses present opportunities for increased marketing efforts.

(b) SENSE OF THE CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that—

(1) commodity checkoff programs should focus their efforts on improving the marketing conditions for their products and not on efforts to increase production or enhance production techniques of their products where such enhancements do not relate directly to a stronger market for the product;

(2) the boards or councils that oversee commodity checkoff programs under the supervision of the Secretary should implement programs to provide consumers with adequate information on such public issues as environmental developments, food safety, animal husbandry practices, biotechnology, and other similar issues so that the perception of consumers accurately and fairly reflects the relationship between agriculture and these public issues; and

(3) such boards or councils should pursue new food and nonfood uses for agricultural products developed through technological advances that hold promise for increasing the marketability of these products.

SEC. 1842. AGRICULTURE ASSISTANCE PROGRAM FOR FARMER WITH DISABILITIES.

(a) SPECIAL DEMONSTRATION GRANTS.—(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary, in consultation with other appropriate Federal agencies including the Secretary of Education, shall make demonstration grants to support cooperative programs between State extension service agencies and private nonprofit disability organizations to provide on-the-farm agricultural education and assistance directed at accommodating disability in farm operations for individuals with disabilities, and their families, who are engaged in farming or farm-related occupations.

(2) EXTENSION SERVICE AGENCIES.—Grants shall be awarded under this subsection directly to State extension service agencies to enable such agencies to enter into contracts, on a multi-year basis, with private nonprofit community-based direct service organizations to initiate, expand or sustain cooperative on-the-farm agricultural education and direct assistance to farmers with disabilities to utilize farm-oriented expertise to promote accommodation of their disabilities in performing farm operations.

(3) MINIMUM AMOUNT.—No grant shall be awarded under this subsection in an amount that is less than $150,000.

(4) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated $3,000,000 for each of the fiscal years 1991 through 1992 and $5,000,000 for each of the fiscal years 1993 through 1996 to carry out this subsection.

(b) NATIONAL GRANT FOR TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE, TRAINING, AND DISSEMINATION.—(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall award grants to national private nonprofit disability organizations to enable such organizations to provide technical assistance, training, information dissemination and other activities to support services provided under subsection (a).

(2) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated $1,000,000 for each of the fiscal years 1991 through 1995 to carry out this subsection.

SEC. 1843. EMERGENCY GRANTS TO ASSIST LOW-INCOME MIGRANT AND SEASONAL FARMWORKERS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary may make grants, not to exceed $20,000,000 annually, to public agencies or private organizations with tax exempt status under section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 that have experience in providing emergency services to low-income migrant and seasonal farmworkers when the Secretary determines that a local, State or national emergency or disaster has caused low-income migrant or seasonal farmworkers to lose income, or to be unable to work, or to stay home or return home in anticipation of work shortages. Emergency services to be provided under this section may include such types of assistance as the Secretary determines to be necessary.

The report should also contain initial recommendations outlining additional categories of users who might also be permitted access to the network or system for a fee, and the types of safeguards which would be reasonably necessary to limit file access as may be necessitated in accordance with provisions of the Privacy Act of 1974 (5 U.S.C. 552a) and other relevant authorities governing the disclosure of individual or proprietary infomation.

(2) In order to increase the efficiency of agricultural programs administered by the Department of Agriculture and to reduce the burden of paperwork on participants in such programs, the Secretary shall design and adopt, insofar as practicable, one brief application form to be used by applicants for participation in the agricultural programs of the Department of Agriculture, including, but not limited to, the programs described in subsection (a) of this section. The report required by subsection (a) shall include information with regard to the progress made by the Department toward compliance with this subsection, and shall also identify any statutory impediments to the use of such single brief from.

(d) Notwithstanding the foregoing provisions of this section, the Secretary shall take appropriate action to integrate the various data bases of the Department of Agriculture relating to agricultural program data, and shall facilitate the sharing of relevant data among the various agencies of the Department, including, but not limited to, the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service and the Soil Conservation Service and the Farmers Home Administration.

SEC. 1856. BUY AMERICA.

(a) It is the sense of Congress that a recipient (including a nation, individual, group, or organization) of any form of farm subsidy, aid, or other Federal assistance under this Act should, in expending that assistance, purchase American-made equipment and products.

"(II) in the case of a married couple consisting of spouses who, prior to their marriage, were separately engaged in unrelated farming operations, each spouse shall be treated as a separate person actively engaged in farming with respect to the farming operation brought into the marriage by such spouse, so long as such spouse continues to provide a significant contribution of active personal management or labor in relation to the farming operation brought into the marriage; or

"(III) in the case of a married couple wherein, following their marriage, either of the spouses becomes the owner of an unrelated farming operation by way of gift (in anticipation of death or upon disability of the donor), devise, or descent, such spouse may be treated as a separate person actively engaged in farming with respect to the acquired farming operation, so long as such spouse shall provide a significant contribution of active personal management or labor in relation to the farming operation so acquired.".

SEC. 1858. SENSE OF CONGRESS CONCERNING CROP INSURANCE.

It is the sense of Congress that a sound system of crop insurance is desirable in that it will promote the national welfare by improving the economic stability of American agriculture and provide reasonable protection against natural disasters; that cancellation of the current crop insurance program would create unequal treatment among farmers; that improvements aimed at increasing the participation and effectiveness of the Crop Insurance Program are being devised, therefore, funding should be continued.

SEC. 2702. FINDINGS AND PURPOSES.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds that—

(1) the economic well-being of rural America is vital to our national growth and prosperity;

(2) the economic well-being of many rural communities depends upon the goods and services that are derived from national forests;

(3) the economies of many of these communities suffer from a lack of industrial and business diversity;

(4) this lack of diversity is particularly serious in communities whose economies are predominantly dependent on timber and recreation resources and where management decisions made on the national forests may disrupt the supply of those resources;

(5) the Forest Service has expertise and resources that could be directed to promote modernization and economic diversification of existing industries and services based on forest resources;

(6) the Forest Service has the technical expertise to provide leadership, in cooperation with other governmental agencies and the private sector, to assist rural communities dependent upon national forest resources to upgrade existing industries and diversify by developing new economic activity in nonforest-related industries; and

(7) technical assistance, training, education, and other assistance provided by the Department of Agriculture can be targeted to provide immediate help to those rural communities in greatest need.

(b) PURPOSES.—The purposes of this title are—

(1) to provide assistance to rural communities that are located in or near national forests and that are economically dependent upon forest resources or are likely to be economically disadvantaged by Federal land management practices;

(2) to aid in diversifying such communities' economic bases; and

(3) the term "rural community" means—

(A) any town, township, municipality, or other similar unit of general purpose local government having a population of not more than ten thousand (according to the latest decennial census) that is located in a county where at least 15 per centum of the total labor and proprietor income is derived from forestry, wood products, and forest-related industries such as recreation and tourism; or

(B) any county or similar unit of general purpose local government having a population of not more than twenty-two thousand five hundred and fifty (according to the latest decennial census) in which at least 15 per centum of the total labor and proprietor income is derived from forestry, wood products, and forest-related industries such as recreation and tourism

(f) APPROVAL.—After reviewing requests under this section for financial and economic feasibility and viability, the Secretary shall approve and implement in accordance with section 2705 those action plans that will achieve the purposes of this title.

SEC. 2705. ACTION PLAN IMPLEMENTATION.

(2) the economic well-being of many rural communities depends upon the goods and services that are derived from national forests;

(3) the economies of many of these communities suffer from a lack of industrial and business diversity;

(4) this lack of diversity is particularly serious in communities whose economies are predominantly dependent on timber and recreation resources and where management decisions made on the national forests may disrupt the supply of those resources;

(5) the Forest Service has expertise and resources that could be directed to promote modernization and economic diversification of existing industries and services based on forest resources;

(6) the Forest Service has the technical expertise to provide leadership, in cooperation with other governmental agencies and the private sector, to assist rural communities dependent upon national forest resources to upgrade existing industries and diversify by developing new economic activity in non-forest-related industries; and

(7) technical assistance, training, education, and other assistance provided by the Department of Agriculture can be targeted to provide immediate help to those rural communities in greatest need.

(b) PURPOSES.—The purposes of this title are—

(1) to provide assistance to rural communities that are located in or near national forests and that are economically dependent upon forest resources or are likely to be economically disadvantaged by Federal land management practices;

(B) any county or similar unit of general purpose local government having a population of not more than twenty-two thousand five hundred and fifty (according to the latest decennial census) in which at least 15 per centum of the total labor and proprietor income is derived from forestry, wood products, and forest-related industries such as recreation and tourism

AUTHORIZING CERTAIN SERVICES TO BE PROVIDED TO THE ARMED FORCES IN CONNECTION WITH MILITARY HISTORICAL COLLECTIONS

Mr. HUTTO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Armed Services be discharged from further consideration of the bill (H.R. 3762) to amend title 10, United States Code, to authorize certain services to be provided to the Armed Forces in connection with military historical collections, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida?

Mr. LENT. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, and I will not object, I want to give the gentleman from Florida an opportunity to explain this legislation.

Mr. HUTTO. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. SPEAKER, H.R. 3762 is an amendment to change title 10, section 2572, to specifically allow the exchange of "items for services" as well as "items for similar items."

The existing provision in title 10, section 2572 specifically allows the Service Secretary to "exchange items not needed by the armed forces for similar items held by any organization, institution, agency or nation."

The property transferred to the Service must be equal to or greater than the property transferred from the Service.

Property covered under the act includes books, manuscripts, works of art, historical artifacts, drawings, plans, models, and condemned or obsolete combat material.

Service secretaries would like to include exchange of Government resources for services such as the restoration of historic aircraft in the museum inventory and recovery of submerged aircraft, but this is not allowed within the scope of the existing statute.

H.R. 3762 simply allows this exchange of resources for services.

Mr. LENT. Mr. Speaker, further reserving the right to object, we support this legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill as follows:

H.R. 3762

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. AUTHORITY TO EXCHANGE PROPERTY FOR SERVICES IN CONNECTION WITH HISTORICAL COLLECTIONS.

(2) in paragraph (2)—

(A) by inserting ", or services provided," in the first sentence after "property transferred" the first place it appears; and

(B) by inserting "in the case of an exchange of property for property" in the second sentence after "preceding sentence".

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

AUTHORIZING PRINTING OF BROCHURE DESCRIBING THE HISTORY, DESIGN, AND FUNCTIONS OF THE U.S. CAPITOL

Mr. BATES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on House Administration be discharged from further consideration of the Senate concurrent resolution (S. Con Res. 118), to authorize the printing of a brochure describing the history, design, and functions of the U.S. Capitol as the seat of the legislative branch of the Government, and ask for its immediate consideration in the House.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate concurrent resolution.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate concurrent resolution, as follows:

S. CON. RES. 118

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That a brochure describing the history, design, and functions of the United States Capitol as the seat of the legislative branch of the Government shall be printed as a Senate document, with appropriate illustrations and diagrams. In addition to the usual number, 250,000 copies of the brochure shall be printed for the use of the Senate and the House of Representatives, to be allocated as determined jointly by the Secretary of the Senate and the Clerk of the House of Representatives.

Mr. BATES. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of Senate Concurrent Resolution 118 to authorize the printing of a brochure describing the history, design, and functions of the U.S. Capitol as the seat of the legislative branch of the Government. This accomplishes one of the goals set by the Commission on the Bicentenary of the House of Representatives, to create a simple, colorful, informative brochure to be available for the many thousands of tourists who visit the Capitol each year.

Mrs. BOGGS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BATES. I yield to the gentlewoman from Lousiana.

Mrs. BOGGS. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I want to thank Mr. BATES for bringing House Concurrent Resolution 338 and Senate Concurrent Resolution 118 to the floor at this time so that work on these publications related to the bicentennial of Congress can be completed in a timely fashion during the remaining months of the bicentennial Congress.

House Concurrent Resolution provides for the publication of the proceedings of one of the finest conferences held during our bicentennial celebrations. This was a research conference that brought together Members of the House and Senate, former members, journalists, political scientists, and historians to discuss the many ways in which all of us can benefit from new research on the workings of Congress, and new directions in interdisciplinary study combining the skills of individuals from various specialties. We hope the wider dissemination of the fine papers at this conference will lead to exciting new directions in research on Congress in the decades ahead.

Senate Concurrent Resolution 118 provides for the printing of a handsome one page brochure on the history, design, and functions of the Capitol as the seat of the legislative branch of Government. This brochure will be available for distribution through the Members offices to the many thousands of tourists who visit the Capitol each year. While many State capitols have such a brochure, until now there has been no general brochure on the U.S. Capitol that places the building in its historical perspective and describes the nature of the legislative branch of Government, as well as giving visitors some orientation to the building itself.

These two publications are part of our ongoing efforts, launched during the bicentennial last year, to reach a broad cross section of the citizens of this country with accurate and interesting information on the workings of Congress. I am very pleased that with the other pressing matters before the House at this time that these two resolutions should receive the attention of the House.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the Senate concurrent resoluton.

The Senate concurrent resolution was concurred in.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Mr. BATES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on House Administration be discharged from further consideration of the House concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 338), authorizing the printing of the proceedings of the bicentennial research conference entitled "Understanding Congress," and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the concurrent resolution.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the concurrent resolution, as follows:

H. CON. RES. 338

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That the proceedings of the bicentennial research conference entitled "Understanding Congress" (prepared by the Congressional Research Service of the Library of Congress) shall be printed as a House document, with illustrations and suitable binding. In addition to the usual number, 2,000 copies of the document shall be printed for the use of the House of Representatives and 2,000 copies of the document shall be printed for the use of the Senate.

Mr. BATES. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of House Concurrent Resolution 338 to authorize the printing of the proceedings of the bicentennial research conference entitled "Understanding Congress." This publication summarizes the activities of last year's highly successful 2-day conference entitled, "Understanding Congress," which brought together Members of Congress and scholars from a variety of disciplines to discuss a wide range of topics in order to improve public understanding of the legislative branch of government.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the concurrent resolution.

The concurrent resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

There was no objection.

SENSE OF HOUSE THAT PEOPLE'S REPUBLIC OF ANGOLA AND UNITA PUT HUMANITARIAN NEEDS ABOVE MILITARY GOALS IN FAMINE RELIEF

Mr. WOLPE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Foreign Affairs be discharged from further consideration of the resolution (H. Res. 446) expressing the sense of the House of Representatives that the Government of the People's Republic of Angola and the National Union for the Total Independence of Angola should put humanitarian needs above military goals in their conflict and allow famine relief assistance to be delivered through corridors of safe passage to areas of Angola threatened by famine, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the resolution.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 446

Whereas it is the policy of the United States to offer humanitarian assistance to countries whose population is suffering from famine or natural or manmade disaster;

Whereas Angola has experienced a severe drought since 1988;

Whereas many people in Angola have already died of starvation and 250,000 other civilians in Angola are at immediate risk of famine;

Whereas famine conditions throughout Angola will become especially severe unless food and other famine relief assistance are delivered through international relief and private voluntary organizations through areas of safe passage;

Whereas the famine in Angola has been exacerbated by the ongoing civil war between the Government of the People's Republic of Angola and the National Union for the Total Independence of Angola (commonly referred to as "UNITA");

Whereas both the Angolan Government and UNITA have indicated their willingness to meet the emergency needs of the people of Angola;

Whereas the United Nations has played a useful role in facilitating relief assistance in countries where conflicts exist: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That it is the sense of the House of Representatives that—

(1) the Government of the People's Republic of Angola and UNITA should—

(A) put humanitarian needs above military goals in their conflict;

(B) reaffirm that deprivation of food and medicine will not be used as a weapon in the course of their political and military conflict;

(C) agree to free passage arrangements between themselves, neighboring countries, and private voluntary relief organizations to allow the safe delivery of the necessary amount of food and other relief assistance to all areas of Angola threatened by famine;

(D) enter into discussions with international relief organizations and countries willing to offer famine relief assistance to develop a comprehensive agreement relating to the most efficient and cost-effective means of delivering the required famine relief supplies to Angola;

(E) work toward a cessation of hostilities and conclude the ongoing negotiations aimed at bringing an end to the civil war and establishing a lasting peace in Angola; and

(F) take immediate steps to encourage other southern African countries to cooperate in the delivery of famine relief supplies;

(2) the Government of Angola should continue to work with the United Nations and donor countries and should develop a comprehensive agreement for the delivery of the required famine relief supplies through international relief and private voluntary organizations using efficient and cost-effective means of transporting such relief throughout Angola;

(3) the Administrator of the Agency for International Development should be prepared to participate in and contribute to an emergency famine relief plan consistent with any agreement described in paragraph (2) for the delivery of famine relief assistance from the United States to Angola; and

(4) all those entities supplying external military support to either the Government of Angola or UNITA should work with the Government of Angola and UNITA to promote the successful conclusion of the ongoing negotiations, and end to the civil war, and a lasting peace in Angola.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, and I will not object, I yield to my colleague, the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. WOLPE. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, this urgent resolution, which I believe to be noncontroversial, has been introduced by Congressman TONY HALL, chairman of the Select Committee on Hunger, and 21 of our colleagues from both sides of the aisle. It addresses what may be the greatest humanitarian crisis in Africa today: starvation in Angola. As in Ethiopia, Sudan, and Mozambique, a combination of intensified war and continuing drought have compounded Angola's ongoing tragedy of political conflict. On top of more than half a million Angolans who have died as a direct or indirect result of the war between the Angolan Government and UNITA insurgents, well over 200,000 Angolans now appear to be at immediate risk of starvation. Comprehensive, up-to-date, independent assessments of emergency needs in both government and UNITA-controlled areas are nonexistent. There is no internationally approved plan of action for overland deliveries of food and medicine to all needy Angolans. Moreover, even if such a plan is developed in the next few weeks, it will be almost entirely ineffective unless both parties to the conflict in Angola put a new emphasis upon humanitarian as opposed to military priorities and evidence a new willingness to renounce the use of food as a weapon of war.

The resolution therefore expresses the sense of Congress that: the Government of Angola and UNITA should put humanitarian goals above military ones, reaffirm they will not use deprivation of food and medicine as a weapon, agree to free passage arrangements between themselves, neighboring countries and private and voluntary organizations to allow safe delivery of food to all threatened areas, work with international relief organizations and donors to develop a comprehensive agreement on the most efficient and cost-effective means of delivering famine relief, and encourage other southern African nations to cooperate in this effort.

The Government of Angola should continue to work with the United Nations and the donors to develop a comprehensive agreement for the delivery of relief through international and private and voluntary organizations using efficient and cost-effective means of transport; and the U.S. Agency for International Development should contribute to emergency relief consistent with such a plan.

It is encouraging that both Government of Angola and UNITA have indicated a willingness to cooperate with relief efforts and have intensified their discussions with the United Nations, the International Red Cross, and other donors.

However, the resolution also recognizes that starvation and suffering in Angola will not end unless the war itself ends. As we have seen in Ethiopia, Sudan, and Mozambique, humanitarian efforts can only do so much in a country that is gradually being destroyed by war. And until there is an effective cease-fire, the odds of establishing effective safe passage arrangements for food supplies will be low. Even before the current crisis, over 500,000 Angolans, out of a population of only 9.5 million, had perished in the last decade of this tragic war. Most deaths were of children under 5 and resulted from war-induced starvation, disease, and the destruction of health services. By the end of 1988, UNICEF estimated that a child under 5 died every 3 to 5 minutes in Angola—17 an hour and 409 a day. Over one-third of the population has been displaced or forced to flee the country. Approximately three-fourths of small town and rural water systems have been destroyed as well as 25 percent of health and primary education units. The country has been devastated, its whole future jeopardized.

Therefore, the resolution calls for both the Angolan Government and UNITA to work toward a cease-fire and complete ongoing negotiations for an end to the war. It also underlines the responsibilities of "all those entities supplying external military supplies to either the Government of Angola or UNITA to promote an end to the war. As we all know, the foremost military suppliers are the Soviet Union and the United States. Each day that external lethal arms flow into Angola from the Soviet Union, the United States, South Africa, or other countries is another day that perpetuates Angola's humanitarian crisis and tarnishes our own credibility on humanitarian issues.

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, further reserving the right to object, I yield to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. HALL].

Mr. HALL of Ohio. I thank the gentleman from Indiana for yielding, and I thank the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. Speaker, I would just want to say briefly the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. WOLPE] explained very adequately what the resolution is all about. We think it is a good, positive statement about 250,000 people in Angola who are at risk. We have great bipartisan support, and we hope that this paves the way for humanitarian assistance and so forth through the corridors of safe passage in Angola.

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, further reserving the right to object, I yield to the gentleman from New York [Mr. GILMAN].

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise to commend the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. HALL], our distinguished chairman of the Select Committee on Hunger, as well as the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. WOLPE], our distinguished chairman of the subcommittee of the Committee on Foreign Affairs, and the ranking minority member, the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BURTON], for bringing this measure to the floor despite the late hour.

This is a critical matter affecting hundreds of thousands of people in Angola. I think it important that this body give attention to this matter as well as the entire world.

I ask support for the measure.

(Mr. BURTON of Indiana asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, the people of Angola have suffered far too long from war, famine, and starvation. It is high time that their plight be alleviated. Our first priority in Angola is to ensure that close to 1 million people who are in danger of starvation are adequately fed. The Office of Foreign Disaster Assistance at the State Department says southern Angola is Africa's worst humanitarian disaster. This resolution is part of an urgent effort to meet that emergency.

Our long-term goal in Angola is the achievement of a peaceful democracy. If Namibians have the right to choose their own leaders, Angolans should have that very same right. A border created by European powers should not determine that democracy is valid on one side of the border but not the other.

Our support for UNITA remains firm until reconciliation is achieved. I am very hopeful about recent indications from Angola. There are signs that both sides are ready for serious talks and an end to that horrible conflict. Both sides must recognize that a military solution is not possible in Angola. It is time to end the war and let the Angolan people decide their future on their own. I urge the Government of Angola and UNITA to negotiate in earnest and reach a peace settlement. The United States stands ready to assist, of course. It is my fervent hope that this famine emergency will be met, and that it will spur both sides to make a permanent peace.

Mr. HEFLEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of this resolution. As cochairman of the House Task Force in Angola, I have become increasingly concerned about the desperate situation in Angola. Hundreds and thousands of people are in danger of dying if assistance does not begin within the month.

This resolution seeks to bring together, for the first time, the Government of Angola [MPLA] and the National Union for the Total Independence of Angola [UNITA] in an act of humanitarian cooperation.

As my colleagues know, Angola has been enbroiled in a bitter civil war for the last 15 years. This, combined with the recent drought has created a truly alarming situation. We ask that the MPLA and UNITA begin discussions with international relief organizations, the United Nations and any countries willing to offer assistance, to create an agreement to allow relief supplies to be distributed throughout all of Angola by the most efficient manner.

It is my hope, and the hope of many of my colleagues, that the peace negotiations between the MPLA and UNITA, which began several months ago, will be further faciliated as they work together to resolve this desperate crisis. We must do what we can foster peace in Angola and bring an end to the civil war.

I ask the members of this Chamber to put aside your own political beliefs on this manner, and to trust your heart. Do the humanitarian thing. Do the right thing. Vote in favor of this resolution.

Mr. MCCURDY. I rise in strong support of the resolution concerning the tragic famine that is threatening the lives of so many people in Angola. This resolution was put together on a bipartisan basis under the leadership of the chairman of the Hunger Committee, Representative TONY HALL, and it ranking minority member, Representative BILL EMERSON. It addresses what the U.S. Office of Foreign Disaster Assistance has called the worst humanitarian crisis on the African Continent.

Mr. Speaker, the importance of this resolution is highlighted by the fact that Angola faces a famine that could easily rival those experienced by Ethiopia and Sudan in recent years. At least 250,000 Agolans face the immediate threat of starvation, and it is possible that even more people are at risk. This resolution serves as a vehicle to bring this crisis to the world's attention.

Perhaps equally important, Mr. Speaker, this resolution is a balanced, bipartisan effort which urges the Government of Angola and the UNITA rebels to set aside political differences and work with other countries in southern Africa to ensure that food is delivered to all Angolans throughout the country, and to do so in the most efficient and cost-effective manner. It also calls upon the United Nations to play an active role in developing a comprehensive agreement for the safe passage of relief supplies, including from neighboring countries.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, this resolution points out the important fact that this famine is exacerbated by the ongoing civil war in Angola and uges all parties to the conflict to work toward a cessation of hostilities and to reach a negotiated settlement. As chairman of the bipartisan House task force on Angola, I, too, support a negotiated settlement. Indeed, negotiations are the only path to peace in Angola. But if Angola is to have a lasting peace and reduce the possibility of future famines, a vital component of any negotiated settlement must be a firm guarantee that Angolans will be able to determine their own destiny through the democratic process—a process based on the consent of the governed through free, multiparty elections.

Mr. Speaker, Angola is a country of great potential. Instead of experiencing the horrors of famine, Angola could serve as a breadbasket for the rest of southern Africa. It is my hope that this resolution will play a part in helping Angolans overcome this crisis and join the community of democratic nations.

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

The resolution was agreed to.

NATIONAL NEIGHBORHOOD CRIME WATCH DAY

Mr. SAWYER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service be discharged from further consideration of the Senate joint resolution (S.J. Res. 296) designating August 7, 1990, as "National Neighborhood Crime Watch Day," and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate joint resolution.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

Mr. RIDGE. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I yield to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. HUGHES] who is the chief sponsor of the joint resolution.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of House Joint Resolution 468 which will designate August 7, 1990 as National Neighborhood Crime Watch Day. This resolution is intended to promote public awareness of crime prevention organizations and their effectiveness in fighting crime.

National Neighborhood Crime Watch Day will culminate with the seventh annual National Night Out Against Crime on August 7, 1990. At least 21 million people from over 8,000 communities in all 50 States will participate in this anticrime demonstration. From 8 to 10 p.m. eastern standard time, people will sit on their porches, light up their houses, meet with neighbors, and attend various events and activities, like block parties and walk-a-thons. I will be attending a Rock Against Drugs concert in the town of Sea Isle City, NJ in my district on this special evening.

National Night Out Against Crime is a "night for the good guys to take back the streets." It is a show of force uniting citizens and law enforcement officers as they work together in a common cause, to insure safety and protection.

The event is coordinated by the National Association of Town Watch, which serves as liaison between the thousands of communities and organizations involved in crime prevention programs. National Night Out Against Crime serves as an important deterrent to crime by increasing public awareness and encouraging neighborhood patrols. This anticrime effort demonstrates solidarity against crime, the effectiveness of cooperation between citizens and law enforcement, and the willingness of the American people to be involved in protecting their neighborhoods. Such organized community action is an extremely effective way to fight crime. Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting this important resolution.

Mr. RIDGE. Further reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from New York [Mr. GILMAN].

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, it is a privilege to join my good friend and colleague from New Jersey, the distinguished chairman of the Subcommittee on Crime, Mr. HUGHES in support of Senate Joint Resolution 296 designating August 7, 1990 as "National Neighborhood Crime Watch Day."

Mr. Speaker, for each of the past 7 years, millions of Americans have participated in National Neighborhood Crime Watch Day to demonstrate their solidarity against crime.

The terrible violence and suffering associated with the national scourge of illicit drug abuse, has helped energize the public's outcry against all crime. While personal efforts by individual citizens is important, organized community action is indispensable if the war on drugs and other crime is to be won.

National Neighborhood Crime Watch Day is designed to coincide and complement the National Night Out, an anticrime event celebrating its seventh anniversary. An estimated 21 million people from over 7,500 communities in all 50 States will unite in this nationwide event on August 7, 1990.

A neighborhood can effectuate positive change, when in cooperation with local law enforcement officials, it mobilizes its members in an effort to eradicate crime from its streets and homes.

I invite our colleagues to join in support of this legislation.

Mr. RIDGE. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate joint resolution, as follows:

S.J. RES. 296

Whereas neighborhood crime is of continuing concern to the American people;

Whereas the fight against neighborhood crime requires people to work together in cooperation with law enforcement officials;

Whereas neighborhood crime watch organizations are effective at promoting awareness of, and participation of volunteers in, crime prevention activities at the local level;

Whereas neighborhood crime watch groups can contribute to the national war on drugs by helping to prevent their communities from becoming markets for drug dealers; and

Whereas citizens across the United States will soon take part in a "National Night Out", a unique crime prevention event which will demonstrate the importance and effectiveness of community participation in crime prevention efforts by having people spend the period from 8 to 10 o'clock p.m. on August 7, 1990, with their neighbors in front of their homes: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That August 7, 1990, is designated as "National Neighborhood Crime Watch Day", and the President is authorized and requested to issue a proclamation calling on the people of the United States to observe National Neighborhood Crime Watch Day with appropriate programs, ceremonies, and activities.

The Senate joint resolution was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

HOME HEALTH AIDE WEEK

Mr. SAWYER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service be discharged from further consideration of Senate joint resolution (S.J. Res. 343) to designate August 13 through August 19, 1990, as "Home Health Aide Week," and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate joint resolution.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentlmam from Ohio?

Mr. RIDGE. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I yield to the chief cosponsor of the joint resolution, the gentleman from New Mexico [Mr. RICHARDSON].

Mr. RICHARDSON. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to announce that 223 of my colleagues are joining me in recognizing the week of August 13, 1990 as "Home Health Aide Week," to honor home health aides.

House Joint Resolution 618 designates the week of August 13 as Home Health Aide Week, and recognizes the important contributions of home health aides in the provision of quality health care. More importantly, it will encourage others to choose this important vocation.

Due to skyrocketing medical costs, those in need of medical support are turning to more efficient, innovative ways to assure quality, affordable health care. At one-third to one-half the cost of hosptial or nursing home care, home care provides skilled medical care, hospice care, and support services by a team of health care and other professionals. Home Health Aides are a critical component in providing this important, alternative health and social service.

As vital members of the home health care team, home health aides render personal care and assit patients with daily living activities including bathing, dressing, and feeding. Home health aides also provide patients with a clean and safe environment by performing light housekeeping duties.

More importantly, by maintaining close and regular contact with patients, home health aides perform the critical role of observing, monitoring, and reporting changes in patient health status to other providers on the patient home health care team.

I want to thank my colleagues for joining me in recognizing and honoring this valued health care resource. I urge swift passage of this resolution.

Mr. RIDGE. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate joint resolution, as follows:

S. J. RES. 343

Whereas a home health aide is a person who is a member of a multi-disciplinary team which provides health care for patients in a home environment;

Whereas the personal care and health-related services provided by a home health aide are a vital part of the services provided by home care companies and hospices and help to maintain a patient's physical and emotional well-being;

Whereas a home health aide is responsible for assisting members of a health-care team in following a pragmatic, goal-oriented plan of patient care;

Whereas the duies performed by a home health aide include assisting patients in their daily living activities, providing them with a clean and safe environment, providing them with personal care rehabilitative and supportive services, and observing and reporting to other members of the health-care team significant changes in the status of the patient; and

Whereas by providing such important health-care services, a home health aide has a significant beneficial impact on the lives of the patients served by the aide: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the week of August 13 through August 19, 1990, is designated as "Home Health Aide Week", and the President is requested to issue a proclamation calling upon the people of the United States to observe that week with appropriate programs, ceremonies, and activities.

The Senate joint resolution was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and the motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

INTERNATIONAL VISITORS' MONTH

Mr. SAWYER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service be discharged from further consideration of the Senate joint resolution (S.J. Res. 248) to designate the month of September 1990 as "International Visitors' Month," and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate joint resolution.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

Mr. RIDGE. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I yield to the geneltman from New Mexico [Mr. RICHARDSON], who is the chief cosponsor of this joint resolution.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Mr. Speaker, this year the U.S. Information Agency celebrates its 50th anniversary of its International Visitor Program. This outstanding program brings up-and-coming foreign leaders to the United States to see firsthand America's pluralism and diversity. They meet and exchange ideas with American citizens.

In a highly competitive process, American embassies overseas select the most promising mid-career professionals to participate in the month long exchange program. Last year, the program brought more than 5,000 visitors to the United States. Among the international visitor alumni are more than 120 current and former chiefs of state and more than 600 cabinet level ministers around the world. British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and Costa Rican President Oscar Arias are two of the most notable alumni.

Once the visitors arrive in our country, members of the National Council for International Visitors carry out the program. NCIV relies on the support of American volunteers, acting as citizen diplomats, who meet the visitors and share their professional and personal experiences. Nationwide, more than 800,000 Americans in 106 communities and 44 States are active as volunteers in support of the International Visitor Program.

Clearly, this is an outstanding program which deserves congressional recognition. I am pleased to be the sponsor of a resolution designating this September as "International Visitors Month." More than 230 of my colleagues have joined me in support of this resolution.

Mr. RIDGE. Mr. Speaker, further reserving the right to object, I yield to the gentleman from New York [Mr. GILLMAN.)

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of Senate Joint Resolution 248, a bill that designates the month of September 1990, as "International Visitors Month." I would also like to commend the gentleman from New Mexico [Mr. RICHARDSON] for his efforts on behalf of this legislation.

The International Visitors Program administered through the U.S. Information Agency brings up and coming foreign leaders to the United States to develop a better understanding of American culture and the American people. This program gives these individuals the opportunity to personally experience the American way of life.

Last year over 5,000 foreign leaders visited United States through this month long program, which not only creates opportunities for international business but helps shape American foreign policy. The participants can draw from an array of foreign experts to examine current domestic policy problems.

In its 50-year history more than 800,000 Americans in 106 communities and 44 States have supported the program with volunteer assistance from the National Council for International Visitors.

Mr. Speaker, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and the President of Costa Rica, Oscar Arias are a few examples of world leaders who have participated in the International Visitors Program. Accordingly, I invite my colleague to join in supporting this legislation.

Mr. RIDGE. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate joint resolution, as follows:

S.J. RES. 248

Whereas the United States Information Agency conducts educational and cultural exchange programs that bring current and future foreign leaders to the United States, often for their first visit;

Whereas the experiences of these visitors affect attitudes and decisions regarding our country and international relations in general;

Whereas the success of these programs depends on the visitors' seeing American democracy in all its openness and diversity;

Whereas such broad and meaningful exposure requires thousands of volunteers, who open their homes, businesses and communities to more than 5,000 visitors each year;

Whereas such volunteer efforts are coordinated by the National Council for International Visitors, comprised of 103 not-for-profit community organizations throughout the United States and 42 national programming agencies;

Whereas these international visits not only enrich the United States and the world in cultural, social, and human terms, but also provide the United States and foreign nations opportunities in international trade, commerce, and economic development; and

Whereas the continuing vitality and growing value of such programs depend upon community awareness and support: Now, therefore be it

Resolved by the Senate and the House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That September 1990 is designated as "International Visitors' Month". The President is authorized and requested to issue a proclamation calling upon the people of the United States to observe that month with appropriate ceremonies and activities.

The Senate joint resolution was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and the motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

FURTHER MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A further message from the Senate by Mr. Hallen, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment a bill and a concurrent resolution of the House of the following titles:

H.R. 5350. An act to provide for a temporary increase in the public debt limit; and

H. Con. Res. 360. Concurrent resolution providing for an adjournment of the House from the legislative day of August 3 to September 5, 1990, and a recess or adjournment of the Senate from any day between August 3 and August 10 to September 10, 1990.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed with an amendment in which the concurrence of the House is requested, a bill of the House of the following title:

H.R. 4790. An act to amend the Public Health Service Act to establish a program of grants for the detection and control of breast and cervical cancer.

The message also announced that the Senate insists upon its amendments to the bill (H.R. 996) "An Act to establish the Congressional Scholarships for Science, Mathematics, and Engineering, and for other purposes", requests a conference with the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and appoints Mr. KENNEDY, Mr. PELL, Mr. DODD, Mr. HATCH, and Mrs. KASSEBAUM, to be the conferees on the part of the Senate.

NATIONAL SARCOIDOSIS AWARENESS DAY

Mr. SAWYER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service be discharged from further consideration of the joint resolution (H.J. Res. 519) designating April 16, 1990, as "National Sarcoidosis Awareness Day," and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the joint resolution.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

Mr. RIDGE. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I do so simply to acknowledge the work of our colleague, the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. SLATTERY], who is the chief sponsor of this joint resolution.

Mr. SLATTERY. Mr. Speaker, I thank Mr. SAWYER for this opportunity to talk briefly about a disease called sarcoidosis, which has personally affected a member of my staff—Carolyn Anderson—and has dramatically altered the lives of thousands of other Americans.

Sarcoidosis was first medically described more than 100 years ago but it continues to be a mysterious and difficult disease to successfully diagnose and treat.

Today, an estimated 100,000 Americans have sarcoidosis. And this disease strikes black Americans 10 times more often than any other racial or ethnic group in the United States.

Fortunatley, like my receptionist, Carolyn, many of these individuals are in remission and are not actively suffering from the symptoms of this disease.

However, hundreds of sarcoidosis victims do suffer every day from a variety of painful and potentially debilitating conditions including fatigue, headaches, persistent coughing, and in extreme instances—death.

Despite the physical limitations caused by sarcoidosis, these individuals and their families remain optimistic about treatment options and attempt to lead near-normal lives.

This afternoon, I am very pleased to bring to the floor House Joint Resolution 519, which will designate August 29, 1990, as National Sarcoidosis Awareness Day.

Enactment of this resolution is the result of months of work by my staff, the American Lung Association, and the Sarcoidosis Family Aid and Research Foundation. House Joint Resolution 519 also has the strong endorsement of HHS Secretary Louis Sullivan and the support of medical researchers across the Nation.

Working together, we have chosen August 29, which also happens to be Carolyn's 42d birthday, to focus national attention on the urgent need for increased research into understanding and finding a cure for this medical enigma.

This national day of recognition also is an important opportunity to provide information to at-risk populations and to increase public awareness of sarcoidosis.

In addition, I intend to work with my colleagues in Congress to increase Federal funding for research into sarcoidosis detection and treatment. Currently, the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases and the National Heart, Lung, and Blood Institute are conducting important sarcoidosis research.

With adequate funding, these and other research efforts underway across the country will provide new clues to help solve the mystery of sarcoidosis.

In closing, I want to thank my good friend and colleague from Maryland, KWEISI MFUME, for his personal commitment to House Joint Resolution 519 and his leadership in drawing much needed understanding and compassion to the victims of sarcoidosis.

Mr. RIDGE. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the joint resolution, as follows:

H.J. RES. 519

Whereas sarcoidosis is a systemic disease of unknown causes that can affect any part of the body;

Whereas sarcoidosis affects between 20 and 50 individuals in the United States in 100,000;

Whereas most victims of the disease range in age between 20 and 40 years, with blacks being affected at least 10 times more often than other ethnic groups in the United States;

Whereas between 10 and 20 percent of individuals stricken with sarcoidosis eventually develop serious disabling conditions caused by damage to vital organs, such as lungs, heart, and central nervous system;

Whereas sarcoidosis is an enigma in the realm of medicine and disease requires extensive and ongoing study and research in an effort to develop an effective treatment and eventually a cure;

Whereas individuals with sarcoidosis and family members across the United States are seeking treatment and support services to assist in controlling the effects of the disease;

Whereas grassroot support groups and nonprofit organizations are forming across the United States to encourage public awareness of the mysterious and debilitating disease;

Whereas the Federal Government has a responsibility to lead a nationwide effort to find a cure for the disabling disease; and

Whereas the Federal Government should make research into the causes of the life-threatening ailment a greater priority and provide the public with more information about potential treatments for individuals with sarcoidosis: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That April 16, 1990, is designated as "National Sarcoidosis Awareness Day", and the President is authorized and requested to issue a proclamation calling upon the people of the United States to observe the week with appropriate ceremonies and activities.

IRISH-AMERICAN HERITAGE MONTH

Mr. SAWYER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service be discharged from further consideration of the joint resolution (H.J. Res. 482) designating March 1990 as "Irish-American Heritage Month," and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the joint resolution.

The Speaker. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

Mr. RIDGE. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I do so to acknowledge the work of the gentleman from New York [Mr. MANTON], who is the chief sponsor of this joint resolution.

Mr. SPEAKER, reserving the right to object, I yield to the gentleman from New York [Mr. GILMAN].

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise in support of House Joint Resolution 482, designating Irish American Heritage Month. And I would like to commend my colleague from New York [Mr. MANTON] for introducing this resolution.

The Irish, and in particular, the New York Irish have had a proud and rich history in the United States of America.

However, this year is particularly significant for one group of American Irish. This year, the American-Irish Carmelites celebrate their 100th anniversary of ministering to the poor and the sick in New York.

As you may know, the Carmelite Order originated on Mount Carmel in the Holy Land. After being driven from that land, the Carmelites settled in Ireland in 1271. Centuries later missions were established in New York and Australia to minister to the sick and the poor.

And for 100 years, the Carmelite Order in New York has been reaching out to the sick and the poor, regardless of who they might be or what they might believe.

Mr. Speaker, I am particularly proud to note that the Carmelite Province of Saint Elias, the Carmelite Mission to the United States, is headquartered in my hometown of Middletown, NY. Further, the largest Carmelite parish outside of New York City, is located in Tarrytown, NY, which is also within my congressional district.

I am pleased to rise in support of this measure, and I urge my colleagues as well to join in support of this important measure.

Mr. IRELAND. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of House Joint Resolution 482 a resolution to proclaim the month of March 1991 "Irish-American Heritage Month." I wish to compliment the original cosponsors of this initiative, Representatives THOMAS MANTON and BRIAN DONNELLY for their foresight in offering this historic tribute to the enormous contributions made to this great Nation by the millions of Irish immigrants who have come to our shores and by the tens of millions of their descendents who now number some 42 million. I also wish to commend the American Foundation for Irish Heritage and their hard-working chairman, Mr. John W. O'Beirne, who has spent months working the Halls of the House and Senate seeking cosponsors for this legislation. It was Mr. O'Beirne who originally approached Congress with this idea.

One does not have to look far here in the Nation's Capitol to see the Irish influence on America. The Great Seal of the United States was designed by Charles Thomson, a native of County Derry. Thomson was the only Secretary of the Continental Congress and was assigned by the Congress to notify George Washington that he had been elected to serve as our first President. The White House, home to our Presidents, was designed by James Hoban who emigrated from County Kilkenny in 1785. Hoban also supervised its reconstruction after it had been burned in 1814. Hoban went on to design the State and War Offices and also assisted in the building of the U.S. Capitol. Thomas Lincoln Casey, a member of a Rhode Island Irish family directed the completion of the Washington Monument. And on and on it goes.

All walks of life in this Nation have been home to the Irish, from literature, to education, to the arts, to sports, to business, to labor, to government. Appreciation of that fact is often seen most particularly during the month of March. I, myself, host an annual St. Patrick's event in my home area. Many communities in the State of Florida have annual St. Patrick's Day parades led by large gatherings in Jacksonville, Fort Lauderdale, and Miami.

Mr. Speaker in honor of the 42 million Irish-Americans which include the more than 1½ million Floridians who claimed Irish heritage in the 1980 census, I am pleased to support this legislation and was honored to have been the 12th Member of the House to have signed on in support of his historic resolution.

Mr. CONTE. Mr. Speaker, I am proud to be an original cosponsor of House Joint Resolution 482 which would designate the month of March 1991 as "Irish-American Heritage Month."

I have participated for many, many years in the annual St. Patrick's Day parade in Holyoke, MA. It is one of the largest St. Patrick's Day parades in the country and I am proud to have been a participant and I hope to be included in many in the future. There are over 200 communities in the country that support such parades and they are only one manifestation of the growing interest in Irish heritage across the land.

In the 1980 census Massachusetts reported over 1.5 million citizens of Irish descent and there were 40.7 million in the country as a whole. I am sure that this number will be even higher when the 1990 census is reported.

In Massachusetts the contributions of Irish-Americans are too numerous to mention. From Patrick Carr, who died in the Boston Massacre of 1770, and the Irish-Americans who fought at Bunker Hill to latter-day famous sons like President John F. Kennedy, Jr. and my good friend, Speaker of this House for 10 years, Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill, Jr. Irish-Americans from Massachusetts have helped to shape our Nation's history.

That is why, when I was asked by the American Foundation for Irish-American Heritage to support this resolution, I was more than pleased to help. The foundation seeks to bring attention to the significant contributions the Irish have made to America and I applaud their efforts.

Since the founding of our Nation Irish-Americans have been active in making America great. In the law, in politics, in literature, in the arts, in sports, and in business the contributions of Irish-Americans deserve the recognition this legislation would bestow.

Mr. DONNELLY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of House Joint Resolution 482. This is a resolution to designate the month of March 1991, as Irish American Heritage Month.

This is a noncontroversial resolution commemorating the heritage of over 40 million Americans of Irish descent. Irish American Heritage Month celebrates a national recognition of the contributions made by Americans of Irish ancestry.

The Irish have played a significant role in the United States' rise to independence. By 1776 nearly 300,000 natives of Ireland had emigrated to the United States. A French major general, who witnessed the U.S. victory at Yorktown over the English, reported that Congress owed it's existence to the fidelity of the Irish that fought there. The Declaration of Independence was signed by at least eight Irish Americans. The Irish have contributed to the advancement of our culture, including education, art, science, business, industry, governmental service and athletics. The Irish that have emigrated to this country have embodied, promoted and perserved American Ideals.

This resolution is an expression of sincere appreciation of Irish Americans commitment to the growth and development of the United States. This commemorative resolution will provide Members with an opportunity to recognize and honor the lasting contributions that have enriched many aspects of life in these United States.

Mr. RIDGE. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the joint resolution, as follows:

H.J. RES. 482

Whereas by 1776 nearly 300,000 natives of Ireland had emigrated to the United States;

Whereas, following the victory at Yorktown over the English, a French Major General reported that Congress owed its existence, and America, possibly her preservation, to the fidelity of the Irish;

Whereas at least 8 signers of the Declaration of Independence were of Irish origin;

Whereas Charles Thomson, born in Ireland, was Secretary of the Continental Congress;

Whereas Irish-born James Hoban designed the White House, the State and war offices, and assisted in the building of the United States Capitol;

Whereas on March 17th each year, St. Patrick's Day, 130 community parades honor the patron saint of Ireland;

Whereas more than 480 institutions of higher learning in the United States offer courses in Irish studies;

Whereas the Irish and Irish descendants have contributed greatly to the enrichment of all aspects of life in the United States, including military and governmental service, science, education, art, agriculture, business, industry, and athletics; and

Whereas, in the 1980 census, 40,700,000 individuals in the United States claimed to be of Irish descent: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That March 1990 is designated as "Irish-American Heritage Month", and the President of the United States of America is authorized and requested to issue a proclamation calling upon the people of the United States to observe the month with appropriate ceremonies and activities.

NATIONAL DRIVE FOR LIFE WEEKEND

Mr. SAWYER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service be discharged from further consideration of the joint resolution (H.J. Res. 627) designating Labor Day weekend, September 1 through September 3, 1990, as "National Drive for Life Weekend," and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the joint resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. (Mr. NAGLE). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

Mr. RIDGE. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object for the final time this evening, I do so to acknowledge the work of the gentleman from California [Mr. MINETA].

Mr. HAMMERSCHMIDT. I rise in support of H.J. Res. 627 designating Labor Day weekend, September I through September 3, 1990 as "National Drive for Life Weekend."

We have made great progress in the fight against drunk driving in recent years. By raising the public's awareness of the problem and passing tougher drunk driving laws at both the Federal and State levels, alcohol use by our Nation's drivers has steadily decreased. But still, 23,000 lives were needlessly lost last year in drunk driving related accidents. Our fight is not yet over.

National Drive for Life Weekend is a public awareness campaign which asks all Americans to pledge to be responsible by driving sober and encouraging others to do the same. In addition, drivers are urged to turn on their headlights while driving on Saturday, September 1, as a remembrance of those people killed or injured by drunk-driving incidents. In these ways, we can all demonstrate our commitment to help reduce the tragic consequences of mixing alcohol and driving.

I urge all my colleagues to support this resolution in a further effort to make our highways safer for all of us.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, let me express my support of House Joint Resolution 627, "National Drive for Life Weekend."

In 1989, more than 23,000 individuals were killed in alcohol-related crashes. Estimates of the economic costs of drunk driving in the United States are as high as $24 billion. The human cost is incalculable.

We may not erase the drunk driver from the scene totally, but we can go a long way toward reducing the human and economic costs currently associated with drunk driving.

Last year, during the annual National Drive for Life weekend, the number of individuals killed in drunk driving related crashes in the United States was 25.7 percent lower than the average number of deaths that resulted from drinking and driving the year before.

Last year's National Drive for Life campaign featured endorsements from all 50 U.S. Governors, more than 160 mayors, and all 50 State police departments, and other prominent public officials.

This year's resolution, by bringing to the public's attention the need for a continued commitment not to drink and drive, can again have a significant effect on reducing fatalities on our Nation's highways.

I urge adoption of this resolution.

Mr. MINETA. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of House Joint Resolution 627, which would designate Labor Day weekend, September 1 through September 3, 1990, as National Drive for Life Weekend.

Although there has been a decrease in drunk-driving fatalities over the last 10 years, drunk driving is still the number one killer on our Nation's highways.

An average of 65 individuals are killed in drunk driving related crashes every day.

Two out of every five individuals in the United States will be involved in a drunk driving related crash at some point in their lives.

The Surgeon General has reported that life expectancy has risen for every age group over the past 75 years, except for Americans aged 15 to 24 years old. For this group, the leading cause of death is drunk driving, and the death rate for this group is higher now than it was 20 years ago.

Moreover, drunk-driving arrests are three times the number of arrests for all violent crimes combined.

One reason for the decrease in drunk-driving fatalities in the past 10 years has been increased public awareness. Previous National Drive for Life Weekend campaigns have contributed to this decrease by educating the public about the dangers of drunk driving during the Labor Day weekend.

If we are to significantly reduce the tragedies of drunk driving in the future, we must continue to demonstrate our commitment to such campaigns. Because the bottom line is: drunk-driving deaths are preventable.

Through this resolution, we can again join with those who will be bringing this message home during this year's Labor Day weekend: don't drink and drive.

I urge passage of this resolution.

Mr. RIDGE. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the joint resolution, as follows:

H.J. RES. 627

Whereas drunk driving is the most frequently committed violent crime in the United States, with arrests for driving while intoxicated totaling more than 3 times the number of arrests for all violent crimes combined;

Whereas 1 individual in the United States is killed every 22 minutes in a drunk-driving-related crash, an average of 65 individuals each day;

Whereas more than 23,000 individuals were killed in the United States in drunk-driving-related crashes in 1989;

Whereas 2 out of every 5 individuals in the United States will be involved in a drunk-driving-related crash at some point in their lives;

Whereas the estimates of the economic costs of drunk driving in the United States are as high as $24,000,000,000;

Whereas Americans are also asked to turn on their headlights while driving on Drive for Life Day as a remembrance of those people killed or injured by drunk-driving incidences;

Whereas Drive for Life is a public awareness campaign which asks all Americans to pledge to be responsible by driving sober and encouraging others to do the same on the Drive for Life Day and thereby demonstrating a commitment to significantly reduce the tragedies of drunk driving and which serves to educate the public about the dangers of drunk driving;

Whereas on the third annual National Drive for Life Day, the toll of individuals killed in drunk-driving-related crashes in the United States was 25.7 percent lower than the average number of deaths due to drunk-driving-related crashes on Labor Day weekend Saturday, in 1988, reflecting the success of this campaign;

Whereas the third annual National Drive for Life campaign featured endorsements from all 50 United States Governors, more than 160 mayors, and all 50 State police departments and other prominent public officials; and

Whereas the fourth annual National Drive for Life Day will occur on September 1, 1990, the Saturday of the Labor Day weekend, when drunk-driving-related crashes are traditionally at their peak: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Labor Day weekend beginning on September 1, 1990, is designated as "National Drive for Life Weekend". The President is authorized and requested to issue a proclamation calling on the people of the United States to observe that weekend with a pledge to not drink and drive and other appropriate activities.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

DESIGNATION OF HON. STENY H. HOYER TO ACT AS SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE TO SIGN ENROLLED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS THROUGH SEPTEMBER 5, 1990

The Speaker pro tempore laid before the House the following communication from the Speaker:

WASHINGTON, DC,
August 4, 1990.

I hereby designate the Honorable STENY H. HOYER to act as Speaker pro tempore and to sign enrolled bills and joint resolutions through September 5, 1990.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will begin to call special orders without prejudice to return to special business.

INTRODUCTION OF H.R. 5454, THE TECHNICAL CORRECTIONS ACT OF 1990

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, today, along with Congressman ARCHER, I am introducing the Technical Corrections Act of 1990, a bill which would make technical and clerical corrections to the Revenue Reconciliation Act of 1989, the Technical and Miscellaneous Revenue Act of 1988, and other recently enacted tax legislation.

This bill will assist taxpayers to comply with recent tax law changes by making technical improvements and clarifications to that legislation. The technical corrections included in this legislation are based upon comments received by tax practitioners and other members of the public, policymakers, and staff. I invite the public to comment on these corrections, and to suggest further technical modifications which will improve taxpayers' ability to comply and plan under the existing tax laws.

Mr. Speaker, I believe that it is very important to the efficient administration of the tax law and to taxpayers' confidence in the tax system for Congress to strive to make the language of the law understandable and clear. To the extent mistakes are made in drafting or clarifications are necessary to make statutory provisions more understandable, I believe that such technical corrections must be made as quickly as possible so that taxpayers can plan business affairs with certainty knowing that they are in compliance with existing law. Although the Committee on Ways and Means will be extremely busy with other legislation during the remainder of the 101st Congress, it is of the utmost importance that the committee make the effort to clarify and correct existing statutory provisions where necessary. For these reasons, I intend to bring this technical corrections package to the Committee on Ways and Means for consideration at the earliest opportunity.

Mr. Speaker, it is my hope that these technical corrections will provide assistance to taxpayers in complying with the tax law, and that this package of technical clarifications, along with any further suggestions from taxpayers that may be incorporated into the legislation, will be enacted this year.

I would like to include a copy of the legislation and an accompanying summary of the bill's provisions:

The Secretary may waive all or any portion of the penalty under this clause. DESCRIPTION OF THE TECHNICAL CORRECTIONS ACT OF 1990

The amendments made by the Technical Corrections Act of 1990 are intended to correct, clarify, or conform various recently enacted tax provisions. Provisions in the bill are generally effective as if included in the original legislation, unless otherwise provided. Provisions in the bill for which no descriptions are provided are clerical in nature.

Part I describes technical corrections to the Revenue Reconciliation Act of 1989 ("1989 Act"). Part II describes technical corrections to the Technical and Miscellaneous Revenue Act of 1988 ("1988 Act") and other recent tax legislation.

I. TECHNICAL CORRECTIONS TO THE REVENUE RECONCILIATION ACT OF 1989

A. Low-income rental housing tax credit provisions (sec. 2(a) of the bill, sec. 7108 of the 1989 act, and sec. 42 of the code)

Present Law

A tax credit is allowed in annual installments, generally over 10 years, for qualifying low-income rental housing, which may be newly constructed or substantially rehabilitated property. The credit is expressed as a percentage of the qualified basis of each qualified low-income building. For newly constructed housing and substantial rehabilitation expenditures, the credit percentages are generally adjusted monthly to maintain a present value of the credit stream of 70 percent of qualified basis. For the acquisition cost of existing housing, and housing that is federally subsidized (e.g., that is funded with the proceeds of tax-exempt bonds or below market Federal loans), monthly adjustments generally are made to maintain a present value of the credit stream of 30 percent of qualified basis. The Statement of Managers for the 1989 Act stated that property receiving assistance under the HUD Section 8 Moderate Rehabilitation program would receive neither the 70-percent nor the 30-percent credit. Nonetheless, the statute denies such property only the 30-percent credit.

Qualified basis

The qualified basis of a building is the percentage of eligible basis in a qualified low-income building attributable to the rent restricted low-income rental housing units. This percentage is the lesser of (1) the percentage of low-income units to all residential rental units or (2) the percentage of the floor space of the low-income units to the floor space of all residential rental units.

Eligible basis generally is the cost of acquiring and rehabilitating existing buildings, or the cost of acquiring or constructing new buildings. Eligible basis may be increased by 30 percent for a building within a difficult development area or a designated qualified census tract. A qualified census tract generally is any census tract of a metropolitan statistical area in which 50 percent or more of the households have an income which is less than 60 percent of the area median gross income.

Qualified low-income building

A building is treated as a qualified low-income building only if it is a part of a qualified low-income project within 12 months after the building is placed in service. For a project to be a qualified low-income project, a specified percentage of units must be rent restricted and occupied by individuals with income below specified limits. A unit is rent restricted if its gross rent does not exceed 30 percent of the imputed income limitation applicable to the unit. If the tenant's income rises above 140 percent of the income limitation, the unit is treated as rent restricted only if the next vacant unit is rented to a tenant whose income is within the limitation ("the next available unit" rule).

Allocation of credit

In order for a building to be a qualified low-income building, the building owner generally must receive a credit allocation from the appropriate housing credit agency. An exception is provided for property which is substantially financed with the proceeds of tax-exempt bonds subject to the State's private-activity bond volume limitation. The low-income housing credit is allocated by State or local housing credit agencies subject to an annual limitation for each State. The annual credit limitation was $1.25 per resident for years before 1990 and is $0.9375 per resident for 1990.

In recognition of the fact that a State may not allocate or use all available credits in a given year, present law provides that such unused credit may be carried over for one year. If any amounts are still unallocated at the end of the succeeding calendar year: (1) those unallocated amounts are placed in the national pool for allocation among qualifying States, and (2) the State with such unallocated amounts is not eligible for the national pool that year. Unused credits are defined as the difference between the State's annual credit limitation for a calendar year and the State's aggregate credit allocations for that year.

The statute does not address the carryover of returned credits, e.g., credits previously allocated to projects which do not become qualified projects within the applicable time limitation or any credits for which an allocation is cancelled by the mutual consent of the housing credit agency and the allocation recipient. Returned credits may be reallocated during the taxable year they are returned.

Extended low-income use commitment

A taxpayer may claim low income housing credits only if an extended low-income housing commitment is in effect as of the end of such taxable year. The commitment is an agreement between the taxpayer and the housing credit agency which must be binding on the taxpayer and all successors of the taxpayer with respect to the property for which the credit is claimed. The commitment must require that the portion of the building occupied by low-income tenants (the applicable fraction) for each taxable year in the extended use period is not less than the amount specified in the commitment. The commitment must be recorded under State law as a restrictive covenant and must permit eligible low-income individuals the right to enforce the commitment in the courts of the State in which the property is located. The commitment must provide for an extended period of low-income use. The extended use period must extend at least 15 years beyond the close of the compliance period.

There are two exceptions to the extended use requirement. First, if a building subject to an extendded use commitment is acquired by foreclosure, the extended use period terminates on the date of such acquisition. Second, if after the fourteenth year of the compliance period the taxpayer submits a written request to the housing credit agency to find a person to acquire the taxpayer's interest in the low-income portion of the building, and if by the end of the fifteenth year of the compliance period the housing credit agency has been unable to present a qualified contract for acquisition by any person who will continue to operate the low-income portion of the building as a qualified low-income building, the extended use period will terminate with the termination of the compliance period. A qualified contract is a bona fide contract to acquire the low-income portion of the building for a price not less than the applicable fraction multiplied by a minimum purchase price.

Termination of credit with respect to bond financed property

Authority to allocate credit available under the annual credit ceiling expires December 31, 1990. Generally, the credit may be claimed only for preoperty placed in service in the year the credit allocation is received. An exception to this rule exists for newly constructed or substantially rehabilitated property which is placed in service within two years after the credit allocation was received, if, at the close of the calendar year of allocation, the taxpayer's basis in the project exceeds 10 percent of its reasonably expected basis. For property which is substantially bond financed, a similar exception (the "10-percent exception") applies only with respect to reasonably anticipated costs of construction, reconstruction, or rehabilitation incurred as of January 1, 1990, if the bonds were issued before 1990 and the building is placed in service before January 1, 1992.

Effective date

The amendments to the low-income credit enacted by the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1989 are generally applicable in the case of substantially bond financed property if the property is placed in service after December 31, 1989.

Under the 1989 Act, property that is substantially bond financed (and therefore excepted from credit allocation requirements) must be evaluated under the criteria of the qualified allocation plan applicable to the area in which the project is located, and it must be determined that the credit claimed for the property does not exceed the amount necessary to ensure its economic feasibility (the "conformity to State plan requirement").

Explanation of Provisions

HUD section 8 programs

The bill contains a technical amendment providing that property receiving assistance under the Section 8 Moderate Rehabilitation program at any time during the compliance period receives neither the 70- nor the 30-percent credit.

Qualified census tracts

The bill clarifies that a qualified census tract is one that is designated by the Secretary of HUD based on the most recent year for which census data is available on household income in such tract.

Qualified low-income building

Under the bill, a qualified low-income building must meet the requirements for a qualified low-income project not later than the close of the first year of the credit period for the building. Buildings for which allocations were made under annual State housing credit ceilings before 1990 would be treated as qualified low-income buildings if the requirements for being a qualified low-income housing project are met by the close of the taxable year following the taxable year in which the building is placed in service.

The bill clarifies that a unit will not cease to be a low-income unit because the low-income tenant's income rises above the income threshold, provided that the rent continues to be restricted. This clarification would apply to determinations of qualified basis made after the date of enactment of the bill or made prior to such enactment if the rent was actually restricted for the period of such determination.

The next available unit rule is applied to deep rent skewed projects only for tenants whose incomes rise above 170 percent of the threshold.

Allocation of credit

Under the bill, returned credits, like unused credits, may be carried over for one year. It is intended that credits allocated in excess of the amount necessary to assure project feasibility could be returned.

It is intended that the Internal Revenue Service's responsibility to ensure taxpayer compliance with the minimum standards of the credit does not authorize the Service to examine particular state agency allocations provided that such minimum standards are satisfied. It also is intended that the Service generally not challenge allocations made pursuant to a plan meeting the statutory requisites.

Extended low-income use

The bill clarifies that the extended low-income housing commitment must prohibit the eviction or termination of tenancy (other than for good cause) of an existing tenant of a low-income unit or any increase in the gross rent inconsistent with the rent restrictions on the unit.

The bill also clarifies that an acquisition by foreclosure will not terminate the extended use period if the Secretary of the Treasury determines that the purpose of the foreclosure is part of an arrangement a purpose of which is to terminate that period.

Finally, the bill contains extended use rules for mixed use buildings. It clarifies that the commitment must prohibit the disposition of a part of a building, and that the qualified contract for a mixed use building must specify a price for the nonlow-income portion equal to fair market value.

Termination of credit with respect to bond financed property

The bill modifies the 10-percent exception for bond-financed property to apply only if the bonds are issued before 1991, and the building is placed in service before January 1, 1993. The bill also conforms the 10-percent exception for bond financed projects to that for non-bond financed projects.

Effective date

Under the bill, the amendments to the low-income housing credit provisions enacted by the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1989 are generally applicable in the case of substantially bond financed property where such property is placed in service after December 31, 1989, but are applicable only with respect to bonds issued after December 31, 1989.

In addition, the conformity to State plan requirement applies in the case of property substantially financed with bonds if the bonds are issued after December 31, 1989.

B. Research credit provision

Effective date of extension of credit for qualified research expenditures (sec. 2(b) of the bill, sec. 7110 of the 1989 Act, and sec. 41 of the Code)

Present Law

For purposes of the research credit provided for by section 41, the credit will not apply to amounts paid or incurred after December 31, 1990, and a special rule to prorate qualified research expenditures applies in the case of any taxable year which begins before October 1, 1990, and ends after September 30, 1990. Under this special proration rule, the amount of qualified research expenses incurred by a taxpayer prior to January 1, 1991, is multiplied by the ratio that the number of days in that taxable year before October 1, 1990, bears to the total number of days in such taxable year before January 1, 1991.

Explanation of Provision

The research credit will not apply to any amounts paid or incurred in a taxable year which begins after September 30, 1990.

C. Corporate provisions

1. Treatment of certain high-yield original issue discount obligations (sec. 2(c) of the bill, sec. 7202 of the 1989 Act, and sec. 163 of the Code).

Present Law

The 1989 Act imposed special limitations upon the deductibility of interest on applicable high-yield discount obligations ("AHYDO") issued by a corporation. No deduction is allowed for the disqualified portion of the original issue discount (OID) on an AHYDO and the remainder of the OID is not deductible until paid. The disqualified portion cannot exceed the amount of the OID on the instrument. Deductions are not disallowed for amounts that qualify as qualified periodic interest payments (i.e., generally, interest based on a fixed rate and payable unconditionally at fixed periodic intervals of 1 year or less during the entire term of the debt instrument).

An AHYDO is a debt instrument with (1) a maturity date more than five years from date of issue, (2) a yield to maturity, equal to, or in excess of, five points over the applicable Federal rate, and (3) significant OID. For purposes of determining whether a debt instrument is an AHYDO, any payment to be made in the form of another obligation (or stock) of the issuer (or a related person) is assumed to be made when such obligation (or stock) is required to be made in cash or in property other than such obligation (or stock) (the "payment assumption rule").

Rules similar to the payment assumption rule apply for purposes of determining when the OID portion of an AHYDO is paid.

Explanation of Provision

The bill modifies the manner in which the payment assumption rule is to be applied for determining whether certain instruments are AHYDOs. Under the bill, the payment assumption rule does not apply to a payment in stock for purposes of determining the debt instrument's yield to maturity. However, the payment assumption rule will continue to apply to a payment in stock for purposes of determining whether the debt instrument's term is greater than 5 years and whether the debt instrument has significant OID.

The bill also provides that rules similar to the payment assumption rule will apply in determining the OID portion of an AHYDO. Thus, under the bill, the portion of the yield of an AHYDO that is paid in obligations (or stock) of the issuer (or a related party) is treated as OID that is subject to the special limitations.

2. Limitation on deduction for certain interest paid by corporation to related person (sec. 2(d) of the bill, sec. 7210(a) of the 1989 Act, and sec. 163(j) of the Code).

Present Law

Subject to certain limitations, a taxpayer may deduct interest paid or accrued on indebtedness within a taxable year (sec. 163(a)). The 1989 Act added a so-called "earnings stripping" limitation on interest deductibility with respect to certain interest paid by corporations to related persons. In general, the rule disallows deductions for certain amounts of "disqualified interest," that is, interest paid by a corporation to related persons that are not subject to U.S. tax on the interest received, if two thresholds are exceeded. (If, in accordinace with a U.S. income tax treaty, interest income of a related person is subject to a reduced rate of U.S. tax, a portion of the interest paid to the related person is deemed to be interest on which no tax is imposed.)

To exceed the first threshold, the corporation must have "excess interest expense" as that term is defined in the code for this purpose. To exceed the second threshold, the corporation must have a ratio of debt to equity as of the close of the taxable year in question that exceeds 1.5 to 1. For this purpose, a corporation's ratio of debt to equity generally means the ratio which the total indebtedness of the corporation bears to the sum of its money and all other assets less such total indebtedness. The Secretary is also authorized to prescribe by regulations other days during the taxable year on which the debt-equity ratio must be tested.

Explanation of Provision

The bill clarifies that for purposes of determining whether a corporation's ratio of debt to equity exceeds 1.5 to 1, the term "ratio of debt to equity" means the ratio which the total indebtedness of the corporation bears to the sum of its money and all other assets reduced, but not below zero, by such total indebtedness. Thus, the provision clarifies that if a corporation's total indebtedness is equal to or exceeds the sum of its money and all other assets, then the corporation's ratio of debt to equity is in excess of 1.5 to 1 for purposes of these rules.

The bill also clarifies that the provisions of section 163(j) apply to a corporation for any taxable year if it has excess interest expense, and if its ratio of debt to equity exceeds 1.5 to 1 either on the last day of that taxable year or on any other day prescribed by the Secretary in regulations. Thus, the bill clarifies that if a corporation does not have a debt to equity ratio in excess of 1.5 to 1 on the last day of its taxable year, but does have a debt to equity ratio in excess of 1.5 to 1 on another day during the taxable year on which regulations require that ratio to be computed, then the corporation's deduction for interest expense for the taxable year may be limited under the earnings stripping rules.

D. Employee Benefit Provisions

1. Excise tax on disposition of employer securities (sec. 2(f) of the bill, sec. 7301 of the 1989 Act, and sec. 4978B of the Code).

Present Law

Under present law, an excise tax applies to certain dispositions of employer securities acquired by an employee stock ownership plan (ESOP) in a transaction to which the partial interest exclusion of section 133 applies. Similar excise taxes apply to dispositions of securities acquired in a transaction to which the nonrecognition treatment of section 1042 applied and to dispositions of securities acquired in a transaction to which the estate tax deduction (former sec. 2057) applied. The tax on section 133 securities does not apply to "qualified securities (as defined in section 4978(e)(2)" or to "qualified employer securities (as defined in section 4978A(f)(2)), as in effect on the day before the date of the enactment" of the excise tax.

Explanation of Provision

The bill clarifies that the tax on securities acquired in a transaction to which section 133 applies does not apply to securities to which a tax is imposed under the provisions relating to dispositions of securities acquired in a section 1042 or section 2057 transaction. This clarification conforms the statute to Congressional intent that only one excise tax should be imposed with respect to the disposition of any employer securities and eliminates an unintended inference that the excise tax does not apply in the case of nonpublicly traded securities.

2. Definition of elective deferrals (sec. 2(k) of the bill, sec. 7811 of the 1989 Act, and sec. 403(b)(12)(A) of the Code).

Present Law

Under present law, for purposes of applying the nondiscrimination rules to tax-sheltered annuities, contributions to a tax-sheltered annuity are not considered made pursuant to a salary reduction agreement if the contributions are made pursuant to a one-time irrevocable election made by the employee at the time of initial eligibility to participate in the agreement or is made pursuant to a similar arrangement specified in regulations (sec. 403(b)(12)). Under present law as amended by the Omnibus Reconciliation Act of 1989, a contribution to a tax-sheltered annuity under a salary reduction agreement is not treated as an elective deferral for purposes of the limit on elective deferrals if the contribution is made pursuant to a one-time irrevocable election made by the participant at the time of initial eligibility to participate or is made pursuant to a similar arrangement involving a one-time irrevocable election specified in regulations (sec. 402(g)).

Explanation of Provision

The bill conforms the definition of salary reduction contributions under a tax-sheltered annuity for nondiscrimination testing purposes to the definition of elective deferrals by amending section 403(b) to provide that contributions under a tax-sheltered annuity are not considered to be made under a salary reduction agreement if the contribution is made pursuant to a one-time irrevocable election made by the participant at the time of initial eligibility to participate or is made pursuant to a similar arrangement involving a one-time irrevocable election specified in regulations.

E. Foreign Provision

Definition of annual accounting period for foreign corporations (sec. 2(g) of the bill, sec. 7401 of the 1989 Act, and sec. 6038 of the Code).

Present Law

A U.S. person must furnish the IRS certain information with respect to any foreign corporation which the person controls (sec. 6038). This information is to be furnished for the annual accounting period of the foreign corporation ending with or within the U.S. person's taxable year. For purposes of section 6038, the annual accounting period of a foreign corporation is the annual period on the basis of which the corporation regularly computes its income in keeping its books (sec. 6038(e)(2)).

Similarly, the taxable year of a corporation is generally its annual accounting period, which means for this purpose the annual period on the basis of which the corporation computes its income in keeping its books (sec. 441(b)(1) and (c)). However, the 1989 Act added new Code section 898, under which in certain cases a "specified foreign corporation" is required to adopt a taxpayer year based on the taxable year of its U.S. shareholders.

Explanation of Provision

The bill clarifies that in the case of a specified foreign corporation (as that term is defined in section 898) the corporation's annual accounting period, for purposes of the information reporting and other rules of section 6038, will be its taxable year.

F. Like-Kind Exchange Provision

Like-kind exchanges involving related persons (sec. 2(h) of the bill, sec. 7601 of the 1989 Act, and sec. 1031 of the Code).

Present Law

The 1989 Act provided that if a taxpayer exchanges property with a related person, the exchange would otherwise be eligible for nonrecognition treatment as a like-kind exchange under section 1031, and within two years either the related person or the taxpayer disposes of the property, the original exchange will not qualify for nonrecognition under section 1031. Certain dispositions will not invalidate the nonrecognition treatment of the original exchange. However, nonrecognition will not be accorded to any exchange which is part of a transaction or series of transactions structured to avoid the purposes of the related person rule.

For purposes of this rule, the term "related person" means any person bearing a relationship to the taxpayer described in section 267(b).

Explanation of Provision

The bill provides that the term "related person" includes any person bearing a relationship to the taxpayer described in section 707(b)(1) (relating to certain partnerships). The term continues to include any person bearing a relationship to the taxpayer described in section 267(b).

The amendment is effective with respect to transfers after August 3, 1990.

G. Accounting Provision

Period of amortization for franchises, trademarks, and trade names (sec. 2(i) of the bill, sec. 7622 of the 1989 Act, and sec. 1253 of the Code).

Present Law

Section 1253(d)(3) provides that amounts paid or incurred on account of a transfer, sale, or other disposition of a franchise, trademark, or trade name are treated as amounts charged to capital account unless an exception under section 1253(d) (1) and (2) applies. Under general income tax principles, amounts charged to capital account under section 1253(d)(3) are amortized over the useful life of the franchise, trademark, or trade names. Section 1253(d) permits a taxpayer to amortize certain amounts over 25 years rather than under this general rule, if the taxpayer so elects.

Section 1253(d)(4) provides that for purposes of determining the period of amortization under section 1253(d), there shall be taken into account all renewal options and any other period for which the parties reasonably expect the agreement to be renewed.

Explanation of Provision

The bill clarifies that section 1253(d)(4) provides rules for determining the period of amortization for income tax purposes under the Code. Thus, a taxpayer that must charge amounts to capital account under section 1253(d) and that does not elect the 25-year amortization permitted by section 1253(d) must determine the period of amortization by including the period of any renewal option or any other period for which the parties reasonably expect the agreement to be renewed.

H. Tax-Exempt Bond Provisions

Arbitrage rebate exception for certain construction issues (sec. 2(j) of the bill, sec. 7652 of the 1989 Act, and sec. 148 of the Code).

Present Law

In general

Interest on State and local government bonds generally is excluded from gross income of the holder thereof (sec. 103). Interest on arbitrage bonds is taxable. In general, a bond is an arbitrage bond if more than a minor portion of the proceeds is invested at a yield materially higher than the yield on the issue of which the bond is a part. An exception to this yield restriction requirement is provided for certain temporary investments.

In addition to the yield restriction requirement, arbitrage earned on investments unrelated to the governmental purpose for the bonds ("nonpurpose arbitrage") generally must be rebated to the Federal Government. Nonpurpose arbitrage (other than arbitrage on a reasonably required reserve or replacement fund or a debt service fund) is not required to be rebated if all gross proceeds of an issue (other than such reserve and debt service funds) are spent for the purpose of the borrowing within 6 months after the bonds are issued (the "6-month exception"). Present law is unclear concerning the effect of certain amounts not intended to be spent on eligibility for the 6-month exception.

Construction issues

The 1989 Act provided, in addition to the 6-month exception, an alternative 24-month expenditure period (the "24-month exception") for construction issues. A construction issue is defined as an issue (or a portion of an issue) at least 75 percent of the net proceeds of which is to be used for construction. Qualifying bonds are (a) bonds which are not private activity bonds; (b) qualified 501(c)(3) bonds; or (c) private activity bonds for facilities owned by governmental units.

Under the 24-month exception, a prescribed percentage of the net proceeds of the issue must be spent by the end of each 6-month period within the 24-month expenditure period. At the conclusion of that 24-month period, 100 percent of the net proceeds of the issue must have been spent, except for limited amounts of retainage which must be spent within the succeeding 12 months.

During the expenditure period, the 24-month exception generally applies to amounts in a reasonably required reserve or replacement fund, although only the earnings of such a fund are subject to the spending requirements of the exception. If the issuer elects to rebate those earnings from the date the bonds are issued, however, the 24-month exception does not apply to the fund or earnings thereon.

Issuers may elect to bifurcate an issue into a construction portion and a nonconstruction portion, with the construction portion qualifying for the 24-month exception and the nonconstruction portion being subject to the general rebate requirement. Such an election must be made when the bonds are issued, and at least 75 percent of the designated construction portion must be used to finance construction expenditures. Present law does not expressly address the treatment under this rule of bonds and portions of bonds used to refund other bonds.

Penalty alternative to rebate

Issuers of construction issues also are permitted to elect to pay a penalty in lieu of rebate if the spending requirements of the 24-month exception are not satisfied. The penalty is equal to 1.5 percent of the net proceeds required to be spent but not spent, and is determined as of the end of each 6-month period following issuance of the bonds. Present law is not clear whether the penalty terminates before the final maturity date of the bonds. Present law also is unclear about the interaction of this penalty with another penalty alternative to loss of tax-exemption that applies to governmental bonds (sec. 148(f)(7)).

Special rules for pooled bonds

Special rules determine when the spending requirements of the 24-month exception commence in the case of pooled bonds, i.e., bonds issued to make or finance loans to multiple borrowers.

Explanation of Provisions

The bill makes numerous technical amendments to the 6- and 24-month exceptions. For clarity and ease of administration, the bill restates the entire substantive provisions of the 24-month exception. The following describes the technical amendments made by the bill.

6-month exception

The bill clarifies that, in addition to amounts in a reasonably required reserve or replacement fund and a bona fide debt service fund, proceeds arising after issuance of the bonds that were not reasonably anticipated on the date of issue, are not included in gross proceeds solely for purposes of determining compliance with the 6-month exception. Earnings on such amounts are, however, subject to rebate.

24-month exception

eligible proceeds

The bill clarifies that the 24-month exception applies to the "available construction proceeds" of a construction issue. A "construction issue" is an issue at least 75 percent of the available construction proceeds of which are to be used to finance construction expenditures. The term "available construction proceeds" is defined as the sum of (a) the issue price of the construction issue (less amounts invested in a reasonably required reserve or, replacement fund), (b) earnings on the issue price and on any reasonably required reserve or replacement fund (regardless of whether funded from other than bond proceeds), and (c) earnings on (b). Available construction proceeds does not include amounts received as repayments of acquired purpose or acquired program obligations (and earnings on such amounts).

Earnings on a reasonably required reserve or replacement fund are eligible for the 24-month exception unless the issuer elects to apply the general rebate requirement to such amounts from the date the bonds are issued. Earnings on such a fund arising after conclusion of the 24-month expenditure period (or after the substantial completion of construction if earlier and so elected by the issuer) are subject to rebate in all cases. The special rules of section 148(f)(4)(A) continue to apply to earnings on a bona fide debt service fund. Other amounts not included in available construction proceeds are subject to the rebate requirement under generally applicable rules.

For purposes of both the spending requirements of the 24-month exception and the penalty alternatives, payment of principal on construction bonds is not treated as an expenditure.

Penalty alternatives

1.5-percent penalty

The bill clarifies that issuers may elect to terminate the 1.5-percent penalty which is imposed on unspent available construction proceeds as of the end of each 6-month period at the earlier of (a) expiration of the initial temporary period applicable to the bonds or (b) with respect to any portion of bond proceeds identified as excess, upon substantial completion of construction to be financed with available construction proceeds of the issue. The determination of when construction is substantially complete is intended to be made under rules similar to those of Rev. Proc. 79-5, 1979-1 C.B. 485 as modified by Rev. Proc. 81-22 (1981-1 C.B. 692). For purposes of the 24-month exception, the term initial temporary period means the temporary period described in section 1.103-14(b)(1) of the Income Tax Regulations.

To terminate the 1.5-percent penalty, the issuer must pay a special penalty equal to 3 percent per year (measured from the date of issue through the date described in the preceding paragraph) of the unspent available construction proceeds. Additionally, proceeds for which this election is made must be invested at all subsequent times at a yield not exceeding the yield on the issue of which they are a part, and such proceeds must be used to redeem bonds of the construction issue at the first date on which such redemption is not prohibited under the terms of the bond (regardless of whether the redemption price is above par value).

The bill clarifies that if the issuer does not elect this special 3-percent penalty, the 1.5-percent penalty continues to be payable at the end of each 6-month period until the last bond that is part of the issue (including refunding bonds) matures. As stated above, redemption of bonds before their stated maturity does not terminate liability for this 1.5-percent penalty.

For example, if a construction issue with a 20-year maturity and a 10-year call prohibition qualified for a 5-year temporary period and had $1 million of unspent available construction proceeds at the end of that 5-year temporary period, the issuer could elect to pay a penalty of $150,000 ($1 million multiplied by 3 percent for 5 years) and restrict the yield on the $1 million for 5 years at which time the bonds would be required to be redeemed, or pay $450,000 ($1 million multiplied by 1.5 percent every 6 months for 15 years).

Failure to pay penalties

The bill clarifies that the 1.5-percent and 3-percent penalties are the exclusive alternatives to the payment of rebate under the general rebate requirement. Failure to pay either of these penalties as required results in loss of tax-exemption (from the date bonds are issued) for both original and any refunding bonds unless, in the case of noncompliance which is not due to willful neglect, the Treasury Department waives such a result or accepts in lieu of loss of tax-exemption payment of (a) all such penalty amounts due, (b) an additional penalty of 50-percent of the amount not paid as required, and (c) interest on all unpaid amounts.

Time for payment of penalties

The bill clarifies that all penalties associated with the 24-month exception must be paid no later than 90 days after the period to which the penalty relates.

Portions of an Issue

As stated above, an issuer may designate a portion of an issue as eligible for the 24-month spending requirements. As under present law, such a designated portion must include all proceeds of the issue of which it is a part that are to be used for construction expenditures. Further, for purposes of the spending requirements, the portion is deemed to include earnings on an allocable portion [1] of any reasonably required reserve or replacement fund associated with the issue unless an election is made to apply the general rebate rules to the reserve fund earnings.

Refunding Bonds

The bill clarifies that, in general, the 24-month spending requirement and the penalty alternatives do not apply to refunding bonds. Thus, if bonds are issued partially to fund new money construction and acquisition expenditures and partially to refund other bonds, the portion of the issue properly allocable to the refunding must in all cases be treated as a separate issue not eligible for the 24-month exception, regardless of the purpose for which the refunded bonds were issued. Proceeds of a "new money" construction bond are not affected by a refunding of a new money construction bond and continue to be subject to the provisions of the 24-month exception. A refunding of a bond that was not eligible for the 24-month exception does not permit the proceeds of such refunded bond to be eligible for any portion of the 24-month exception.

This rule is illustrated by the following example: The proceeds of an issue are to be used for $100,000 of construction costs, $50,000 for acquisition of equipment, and $75,000 for the refunding of prior bond issue. The issuer may elect to treat up to $133,000 as a construction issue (i.e., $100,000 divided by .75) but may not treat less than the $100,000 as the construction issue. The issuer may not include any of the refunding amount in the construction issue.

The bill further clarifies that the measurement of the 24-month exception spending periods is not affected by any subsequent refunding of a construction issue, and that any failure to pay a required penalty that results in loss of tax exemption relates both to the original bonds and to all refunding bonds.

Special Rule for Pooled Bonds

The bill codifies the statement in the 1989 legislative history that the general rebate requirement, and not the 24-month exception, applies to pooled bond proceeds during periods when such proceeds are held by the issuer of the pool rather than the ultimate borrower from the pool, if the issuer elects to delay the start of the 24-month expenditure period.

Time for Making Elections

The bill clarifies that, in general, all elections with respect to the 24-month spending requirement and associated penalties are irrevocable and must be made no later than the date the bonds are issued. The election to terminate the 1.5-percent penalty upon completion of construction must be made within 90 days after such completion.

Effective Dates

These provisions of the bill generally are effective as if included in the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1989; however, for bonds for which the 1.5-percent penalty alternative is elected before the date of the bill's enactment, the period for electing the new procedures to terminate that penalty does not expire until 180 days after the bill's enactment.

II. TECHNICAL CORRECTIONS TO THE TECHNICAL AND MISCELLANEOUS REVENUE ACT OF 1988 AND OTHER RECENT TAX LEGISLATION

A. Corporate Provision

Conforming amendments to the repeal of the General Utilities doctrine (secs. 3(a) and (e) of the bill, secs. 1006 and 1018 of the 1988 Act, and secs. 355, 367, 453B of the Code).

Present Law

As a result of changes made by the Tax Reform Act of 1984 and the Tax Reform Act of 1986, gain is generally recognized on the distribution of appreciated property by a corporation to its shareholders. Exceptions apply to certain reorganizations, certain distributions of stock and securities of a subsidiary, and liquidations of certain subsidiary corporations.

Explanation of Provision

The bill makes three conforming amendments. First, the rule set forth in section 355(c) is rewritten to state the rule in the affirmative rather than through a reference to another section (sec. 311); second, the bill clarifies that the addition of section 361(c), relating to distributions in reorganizations, did not create a separate class of section 361 exchanges for purposes of section 367(a) in the absence of an exchange under section 361(a) and (b); and third, the installment sale rules relating to liquidations of subsidiary corporations (sec. 453B(d)) is conformed to the amendments made by the 1986 Act.

B. Accounting Provision

Annual accrual method of accounting (sec. 3(b) of the bill, sec. 1008(b)(6) of the 1988 Act, and sec. 447(g) of the Code)

[1] Allocation of a reasonably required reserve or replacement fund between the construction and nonconstruction portion of an issue should be pro-rata unless another method of allocation more accurately reflects the economics of the financing. Likewise, allocation of issue price between the construction and nonconstruction must be pro rata unless another allocation more correctly reflects the economics of the bifurcation.

Present Law

Application of uniform cost capitalization rules to certain farmers

Under the uniform cost capitalization rules, the direct and indirect costs of producing property generally are required to be capitalized (or included in inventorible costs) and are recovered as income is derived from the sale or use of the property to which the costs relate. In the case of a plant that is produced by a taxpayer in a farming business, the uniform cost capitalization rules apply only if (1) the plant has a preproductive period of more than two years, or (2) the taxpayer is a corporation, partnership, or tax shelter that is required to use an accrual method of accounting.

A taxpayer that is engaged in the production of a plant that has a preproductive period of more than two years generally may elect to deduct the costs of producing the plant as paid or incurred. A taxpayer that makes this election is required to use the alternative depreciation system (which provides for straight-line cost recovery over a longer recovery period than generally applies) for all farm assets that are placed in service in taxable years for which the election is in effect. In addition, if this election is made, gain from the disposition of the plant is taxed as ordinary income to the extent of prior deductions that would have been capitalized but for the election. The election may not be made by a corporation, partnership, or tax shelter that is required to use an accrual method of accounting.

Annual accrual method of accounting

An exception to the uniform cost capitalization rules is provided for certain corporations and qualified partnerships that are permitted to use the annual accrual method of accounting with respect to the trade or business of farming sugar cane. Under the annual accrual method of accounting, revenues, costs, and expenses are determined under an accrual method of accounting and the preproductive period expenses incurred during any taxable year are charged to harvested crops or are deducted in determining taxable income for such year.

Explanation of Provision

Under the bill, certain corporations are allowed to use the annual accrual method of accounting with respect to the trade or business of farming any plant that has a preproductive period of two years or less. In addition, such corporations may elect to use the annual accrual method of accounting with respect to the trade or business of farming any plant (other than citrus or almond trees) with a preproductive period of more than two years provided that the alternative depreciation system is used with respect to all farm assets and the expensed costs are recaptured as ordinary income upon disposition of the plant.

In the case of any corporation that for its first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1986, ceased using the annual accrual method of accounting with respect to a trade or business of farming any plant and that is allowed to use the annual accrual method of accounting with respect to such trade or business for such year only by virtue of this provision, special rules shall apply. The corporation shall be allowed to use the annual accrual method of accounting with respect to such trade or business for such year and for any subsequent year for which a timely Federal income tax return has been filed by filing amended returns with the Internal Revenue Service before January 1, 1991. In the case of a trade or business of farming any plant (other than citrus or almond trees) with a preproductive period of more than two years, the alternative depreciation system must be used with respect to all farm assets placed in service during the years for which an amended return is filed. A taxpayer that files amended returns as required by this paragraph shall not be required to obtain the consent of the Secretary of the Treasury to use the annual accrual method of accounting for such years.

C. Foreign Provision

Treaty-based return positions (sec. 3(c) of the bill, sec. 1012 of the 1988 Act, and sec. 6114 of the Code).

Present Law

Any treaty-based position taken by a taxpayer that overrules or otherwise modifies the operation of an internal revenue law shall be disclosed on the taxpayer's tax return (or by such other means as the Secretary of the Treasury may provide, if no return is required to be filed) in such manner as the Secretary may prescribe (Code sec. 6114(a)). Section 6114(b) of the Code provides that the Secretary may by regulations waive the general requirements for treaty-based return position reporting with respect to classes of cases for which the Secretary determines that the waiver will not impede the assessment and collection of tax. The current regulations enumerate several instances in which the reporting requirements are to be waived (Treas. Reg. sec. 301.6114-1(c)).

Explanation of Provision

The bill clarifies that the Secretary may, by means other than regulations (e.g., by revenue procedure), provide classes of cases with respect to which the treaty-based return position reporting requirements will be waived.

D. Minor Child Provision

Alternative minimum tax treatment of unearned income of minor children (sec. 3(d) of the bill, sec. 1014(e)(5) of the 1988 Act, and sec. 59 of the Code).

Present Law

The 1988 Act generally limited the alternative minimum tax exemption for the unearned income of children under the age of 14 to $1,000. The Act also provided that the child's alternative minimum tax could not exceed the alternative minimum tax which would be imposed on the parent if the parent were allocated the child's tentative minimum tax and the child's regular tax. The 1988 Act provision may result in a family not being entitled to a full alternative minimum tax exemption ($30,000 for a single individual; $40,000 for a joint return) where the parent's alternative minimum taxable income is less than the parent's minimum tax exemption amount.

Explanation of Provision

The bill provides that the child's minimum tax exemption amount with respect to unearned income shall not be less than the child's share of the "unused parental minimum tax exemption". This amount is the excess of the parent's exemption amount over the parent's alternative minimum taxable income for the taxable year.

E. Estate and Gift Tax Provisions

1. Marital deduction for property passing to noncitizen spouses (secs. 2(1) and 3(f) of the bill, sec. 7815 of the 1988 Act, sec. 5033 of the 1988 Act, and secs. 2056(d), 2056A and 2523(i) of the Code).

Present Law

Marital deduction in general

A deduction generally is allowed for Federal estate and gift tax purposes for the value of property passing to a spouse. Generally, no deduction is allowed if the interest passing to the spouse is terminable (i.e., will terminate upon a lapse of time, the occurrence of a contingency, or on the failure of an event or contingency to occur) (secs. 2056(b), 2523(b)).

There are several exceptions to this "terminable interest" rule. One requires that the spouse be entitled to all the income from the interest and have the power to appoint the entire interest (secs. 2056(b)(5), 2523(e)). Another requires that the spouse be entitled to all the income from the property, that no person have a power to appoint any part of the property to a person other than the surviving spouse during the spouse's life, and that an election be made (secs. 2056(b)(7), 2523(f)) (the "QTIP rule"). Unless otherwise elected, the transfer to a spouse of an interest in a joint and survivor annuity under which only the spouses have the right to receive payments before the death of the last spouse to die qualifies for the marital deduction under the QTIP rule (secs. 2056(b)(7)(C), 2523(f)(6)).

Annual exclusion and marital deduction for property passing to noncitizen spouse

The marital deduction generally is disallowed for the value of property passing to a noncitizen spouse. The first $100,000 per year of gifts to a noncitizen spouse, however, is not subject to gift tax if such amount would qualify for the marital deduction if the donee were a U.S. citizen. In addition, property passing at death to a noncitizen spouse may qualify for the marital deduction so long as it passes in a qualified domestic trust (QDT) and satisfies the generally applicable requirements for the marital deduction.

Definition of qualified domestic trust (QDT)

To be a QDT, a trust must meet three conditions. First the trust instrument must require that one trustee be a U.S. citizen or domestic corporation and that no distribution be made without that trustee's approval. Second, the trust must meet regulatory requirements prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury. Third, an election must be made on an estate tax return. The 1989 Act contained provisions allowing reformation of a trust to meet these conditions if the reformation suit is commenced before the estate tax return is filed.

Estate tax on QDT

An estate tax is imposed upon a distribution of principal (other than on account of hardship) from a QDT made prior to the surviving spouse's death and upon the value of property remaining in a QDT upon that spouse's death. Certain benefits are allowed in determining the deathtime tax on QDTs so long as that property is includible in the surviving spouse's gross estate (or would have been includible had the surviving spouse been a U.S. citizen) and the requirements for receiving those benefits are otherwise met by the surviving spouse's estate.

Explanation of Provisions

Transfer tax on property passing to noncitizen spouse

The bill extends the gift tax marital deduction allowed for transfers to citizen spouses of survivor benefits under a joint and survivor annuity to transfers to noncitizen spouses. Upon death, however, such annuity would qualify for the marital deduction only if it met the QDT requirements.

It is intended that the entire $100,000 annual exclusion for gifts to a noncitizen spouse qualify as a present interest under section 2503(b), while only the additional $90,000 exclusion permitted noncitizen spouses must be transferred in a form that would qualify for the marital deduction if the donee spouse were a citizen.

The bill also provides that a QDT will not fail the exceptions for power of appointment and QTIP trusts merely because it permits withholding from distributions to pay the QDT tax.

Definition of QDT

The bill replaces the requirement that the U.S. trustee approve all QDT distributions with a requirement that no corpus distribution be made without being subject to the U.S. trustee's right to withhold the estate tax imposed on such distribution.

The bill also provides that no QDT election may be made on a return filed more than one year after the due date of the return, including any extension. In addition, a reformation to meet the QDT requirements may be commenced any time prior to six months after the enactment of this bill, notwithstanding the prior filing of an estate tax return.

Estate tax on QDT

The bill provides that the QDT tax is not imposed upon any distribution to reimburse the spouse for Federal income tax paid on an item of income of the QDT to which the spouse is not entitled under the terms of the trust, e.g., capital gains if such gains are taxable to the spouse. The bill also allows the State and foreign death tax credits for state or foreign taxes paid by the surviving spouse's estate against the deathtime tax on QDTs if the property is includible in the gross estate of the spouse (or would have been had the spouse been a U.S. citizen).

2. Joint tenancies (sec. 2(1)(3) of the bill, sec. 7815(d)(16) of the 1989 Act, sec. 5033 of the 1988 Act, and sec. 2040 of the Code).

Present Law

The creation of a joint tenancy in property is generally treated as a completed gift. Prior to the 1988 Act, such gift between spouses qualified for the gift tax marital deduction. Only one-half of the jointly held property was subsequently included in the estate of the first spouse to die.

Effective July 14, 1988, the 1988 Act repealed the marital deduction for gifts made to a noncitizen spouse. That Act also provided that jointly held property was fully includible in the estate of the first spouse to die, reduced by the portion of the property for which consideration was received.

The 1989 Act provided that a gift made by creating a jont tenancy in property prior to July 14, 1988 is treated as consideration belonging to the surviving spouse for purposes of determining the value of the tenancy includible in the decedent spouse's estate. The rule does not apply if the creation did not result in a gift, as where a nonresident noncitizen transfers property not situated in the United States.

Explanation of Provision

The bill treats a transfer creating a joint tenancy as consideration belonging to the surviving spouse if the transfer would have constituted a gift had the donor been a U.S. citizen. Accordingly, the amount of joint tenancy property included in the estate of the first spouse to die is reduced proportionately by the amount of the gift.

3. Generation-skipping transfer tax: a. Treatment of certain notaxable gifts in trust (sec. 4(c)(1), (2) of the bill, sec. 1431 of the 1986 Reform Act, and sec. 2642(c) of the Code).

Present Law

The applicable rate for the generation-skipping transfer tax equals the maximum Federal estate tax rate times the inclusion ratio with respect to the transfer. For trusts, the inclusion ratio equals the excess of one over a fraction, the numerator of which is the amount of GST exemption allocated to the trust, and the denominator of which is the value of the property transferred to the trust, with certain reductions.

A direct skip is a transfer subject to the Federal gift or estate tax, determined without reference to deductions, exclusions or credits. A direct skip includes, for example, a gift regardless of whether the gift is a taxable gift under the Federal gift tax.

A nontaxable gift is any transfer of property to the extent such transfer is not treated as taxable because of certain exclusions. Nontaxable gifts which are direct skips have a zero inclusion ratio.

A nontaxable gift in trust has an exclusion ratio of zero only if (1) no portion of the corpus or income of the trust could be distributed to a person other than the individual benefited by the gift, and (2) if the individual benefited dies before termination of the trust, the trust assets will be includible in his estate (the "trust exception").

It is unclear whether the discharge of an obligation of support is treated as a distribution for the benefit of a person other than the beneficiary of the gift. It is also unclear whether to qualify for the trust exemption a trust that terminates on the beneficiary's death must be includible in the beneficiary's estate.

Explanation of Provision

The bill provides that the use of trust property to satisfy any obligation of support arising by reason of State law is to be disregarded in determining whether a portion may be distributed to, or for the benefit of, a person other than the beneficiary of the gift if such use is discretionary or pursuant to any State law substantially equivalent to the Uniform Gifts to Minors Act. Thus, a parent is not treated as having an interest in a trust by reason of powers he may have as a guardian for the child. On the other hand, a parent will be treated as having an interest in a trust if the trust instrument mandates that trust assets be used to discharge a support obligation.

In addition, the bill clarifies that to qualify for one trust exception, the assets of a trust that terminates on the beneficiary's death must be includible in the beneficiary's estate.

b. Effective date of the revised generation-skipping transfer tax (sec. 4(c)(3) of the bill and sec. 1433 of the 1986 Reform Act).

Present law

The generation-skipping transfer tax generally applies to transfers made after October 22, 1986, and to certain inter vivos transfers made after September 25, 1985.

The generation-skipping transfer tax does not apply, however, to transfers under a trust to the extent that such trust consists of property included in the gross estate of the decedent or which are direct skips which occur by reason of the death of any decedent if the decedent was incompetent on the date of enactment of the Reform Act (October 22, 1986) and at all times thereafter until death (the "incompetency exemption"). The tax does apply, however, to a transfer of qualified terminable interest property made after October 21, 1988, to a mentally incompetent spouse.

Explanation of Provision

The bill provides that the incompetency exemption does not apply to property transferred by gift or by means of death to the decedent or trust after August 3, 1990. Thus, property transferred after August 3, 1990 to an incompetent will nonetheless be subject to the generation-skipping tax.

F. Employee Benefit Provisions

1. Definition of leased employee (sec. 4(b) of the bill and sec. 414 of the Code).

Present Law

Under present law, for purposes of certain pension and employee benefit requirements, a leased employee (sec. 414(n)) is treated as the employee of the person for whom the leased employee performs services. A leased employee includes any person who is not an employee of the service recipient if (1) the person performs services pursuant to an agreement between the service recipient and a leasing organization, (2) the person has performed services for the service recipient on a substantially full-time basis for a period of at least 1 year (6 months in the case of core health benefits), and (3) the services performed are of a type historically performed by employees in the business field of the service recipient. The rule under which a person can be treated as a leased employee after performing services for 6 months for the service recipient was added in the Tax Reform Act of 1986 when the employee leasing rules were made applicable for purposes of the nondiscrimination rules for employee benefit plans (sec. 89).

Explanation of Provision

The bill repeals the rule under which a person can be treated as a leased employee after performing services on a substantially full-time basis for 6 months in the case of core health benefits. The repeal of this rule conforms the employee leasing rules to the repeal of the section 89 nondiscrimination requirements for employee benefit plans.

2. Group-term life insurance rules (sec. 4(e) of the bill and sec. 79(d)(6) of the Code).

Present Law

Under present law, group-term life insurance plans cannot discriminate in favor of key employees (sec. 79). For such purpose, a key employee is defined as under the rules relating to top-heavy pension plans (sec. 416). In addition, the term key employee includes any retired employee if the employee was a key employee when he retired or separated from service (sec. 79(d)(6)). For purposes of the group-term life insurance rules, the term employee includes a former employee.

Explanation of Provision

The bill provides that, for purposes of the group-term life insurance rules, a key employee includes any former employee (rather than just a retired employee) if the employee was a key employee when he separated from service. This change relates to provisions that were repealed when section 89 was enacted in the Tax Reform Act of 1986. With the repeal of section 89, these provisions are again operative. The change conforms the definition of key employee to the definition of employee generally under the group-term life insurance rules.

The provision applies to employees who separate from service after the date of enactment.

G. Miscellaneous Provisions

1. Education savings bonds (sec. 3(g) of the bill, sec. 6009 of the 1988 Act, and sec. 135 of the Code).

Present Law

Section 135 provides that interest earned on certain U.S. Series EE savings bonds issued after December 31, 1989, is excludible from gross income if the proceeds of the bonds upon redemption do not exceed qualified higher education expenses paid by the taxpayer during the taxable year. The exclusion is phased out for taxpayers with modified adjusted gross income (AGI) between $40,000 and $55,000 (the phase-out range is between $60,000 and $90,000 in the case of a joint return). For taxable years beginning after 1990, the phaseout ranges are adjusted for inflation. Such adjustments will be rounded to the nearest $50.

Explanation of Provision

The provision clarifies that, after 1990, the $40,000 threshold ($60,000 in the case of a joint return) for the phase-out range will be adjusted for inflation, but that the size of the phase-out range will not change due to inflation. Thus, the phase-out of the interest exclusion will occur over a $15,000 range (a $30,000 range in the case of a joint return), the threshold of which will be adjusted for inflation.

The provision also clarifies that the requirement that the inflation adjustment be rounded to the nearest $50 applies only to establishing the thresholds of the phase-out ranges.

2. Like-kind exchanges of certain partnership interests (sec. 4(d) of the bill, sec. 77 of the Tax Reform Act of 1984, and sec. 1031 of the Code).

Present Law

The Tax Reform Act of 1984 provided that the like-kind exchange rules of section 1031 do not apply to an exchange of interests in a partnership. It is not entirely clear, however, whether this provision applies to organizations which have elected, under section 761(a) of the Code, not to be subject to the partnership provisions of Subchapter K of the Code. The legislative history indicates that this provision was not intended to apply to organizations which have made a section 761 election; instead, an exchange of interests in such organizations would be treated as an exchange of interests in the assets of the respective organizations and the applicability of section 1031 would be determined on the basis of those exchanges. See 130 Cong. Rec. H. 7113 (June 27, 1984) (statement of Mr. Rostenkowski), S. 8410 (June 27, 1984) (statement of Sen. Dole).

Explanation of Provision

The bill provides that, for purposes of section 1031, an interest in a parnership that has in effect a valid election under section 761(a) to be excluded from the application of all of Subchapter K is treated as an interest in each of the assets of such partnership and not as an interest in a partnership.

A SOLUTION TO THE POLLUTION?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ANNUNZIO] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. ANNUNZIO. Mr. Speaker, too many Americans continue to breathe dirty air. Ironically, Webster's defines air as "the mixture of invisible, odorless, tasteless gases that surrounds the earth." I wonder if he had in mind acid rain, urban smog, and air toxics.

What can be done to conserve and strengthen a healthy economic atmosphere? First, we must do the obvious and that is address the problems and the issues that are causing the unhealthy atmosphere. Second, find the solution, and last, take the appropriate steps to improve it. And we have made strides in this area.

But over the last 4 years we have been trying to break the logjam over clean air legislation. Altercations with environmentalists and industrial representatives plagued Congress from passing legislation last year. But this year the House recently passed H.R. 3030, the Clean Air Act Amendments of 1990, a major victory of which I am proud to have cosponsored. And above all, the provisions in this comprehensive legislation will work.

Mr. Speaker, we have made a lot of progress in cleaning up our environment over the last 20 years. Yet there is still much to be done. Back in 1970 when Congress passed the Clean Air Act, it got us moving in the right direction in establishing national air quality standards. And then in 1977 we amended the Clean Air Act. But environmental issues have persisted and will continue to command attention throughout the 1990's.

Global climate warming—commonly known as the greenhouse effect—is in an early stage and acid rain is just coming through this year. Two very vital and rather perplexing issues.

The most pressing environmental issue is global climate warming. Unfortunately, what we currently know about global climate change is only a fraction of what we do not know. What we do know, however, is that human activities affect the environment and these activities are changing the Earth's climate. Activities from the burning of fossil fuels in our powerplants and factories, to the driving of our automobiles, to the destruction of tropical rain forests.

The summer of 1989's record-breaking ozone levels, the scorching temperatures, widespread drought, and new weather data actually made Congress, the media, and the public aware of the dangers of the greenhouse effect.

According to scientists, the burning of oil, coal, and natural gas produces carbon dioxide, which is the most prevalent of the heat-trapping gases contributing about half of the worldwide emissions leading to the suspected warming effect. Chlorofluorocarbons, man-made chemicals such as freon, contribute to another 20 percent. These chemicals are known to have damaged the Earth's protective ozone layer, that part of the stratosphere which absorbs dangerous ultraviolet radiation from the Sun. Other greenhouse gases such as methane—livestock, wetlands, and rice paddies—and nitrogen oxides are believed to account for the rest of the phenomenon.

Some experts contend that acid rain causes such environmental problems as loss of fish in lakes, damage to crops and forests, and corrosion of materials. As rain falls, it absorbs gases and tiny solid particles from the atmosphere. When the absorption of sulfur and nitrogen oxides results in an above-normal degree of acidity, the precipitation is called acid rain. These oxides are primarily products of the combustion of fossil fuels such as petroleum products and coal.

And to complicate the problem, Third World countries are systematically destroying their rain forest in the face of mounting economic and population pressures. That contributes to the problem because when trees decay or are burned, they release carbon dioxide into the atmosphere. An important fact, as I am sure we all know, is that healthy trees absorb carbon dioxide, so it follows that with fewer trees on the planet, more carbon dioxide remains in the air.

I cosponsored H.R. 39, a bill to designate certain lands in Alaska as wilderness. And H.R. 987, the Tongass Timber Reform Act, a bill to amend the Alaska Natural Interest Lands Conservation Act, designating certain lands in the Tongass National Forest as wilderness.

The acid deposition control provision in H.R. 3030 provides for a stringent 10-year phase-in reduction of sulfur dioxide, and reduction of emissions of nitrogen oxides. It will also impose excess emissions fees on any emissions exceeding allowances, and provide deadline extensions for clean coal technologies.

The environment is not a fad. It's here to stay. And every American living deserves to enjoy it without the worry of some life-threatening pollutant entering their system. Perhaps best described by Samuel Coleridge's line from "The Rhyme of the Ancient Mariner"—"water, water everywhere, nor any drop to drink"—could conceivably characterize a growing number of American communities, where the drinking water has been tainted by pollutants. Since the passage of the Clean Water Act 20 years ago and the enactment of the 1987 Water Quality Act amending and extending the Clean Water Act, water issues continue to remain a national concern.

In the past we were concerned about surface waters like lakes, rivers, streams, and open reservoirs that might harbor infectious organisms form sewage and wildlife. Modern agricultural and industrial practices have changed all this. Surface waters have been contaminated by industrial wastes, chemical spills, and runoff from highways and city streets, and the most persistent runoff hazards are asbestos and sodium from the sand and salt used on icy roads. But the greatest havoc has been wrought on land where chemicals from industrial dumps, waste disposal tanks, and wells and septic tanks have seeped into the ground water, the source of drinking water for half the country. Cleaning up the environment is a tremendous and tough challenge.

Several years ago I authored legislation to clean up the north branch of the Chicago River. The Army Corps of Engineers is directed to coordinate the annual north branch debris removal. These types of projects are vital in the continuing effort of maintaining clean rivers and helping the overall reduction of water pollution within major cities. This year the corps, with funds from both fiscal years 1989 and 1990, will be able to perform a complete cleanup of the three forks of the north branch within Cook County.

Every living thing on this Earth deserves to breathe clean air. I do not know of one person that would not want to see the natural beauty of our country preserved and who would not appreciate the value of clean air and clean water. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I say let us clear the air. The solution to the pollution is in our Clean Air Act Amendments of 1990.

A NATIONAL DISGRACE: RELATIVE HEALTH OF BLACKS IN AMERICA

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from California [Mr. STARK] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. STARK. Mr. Speaker, The health of blacks in America is a national disgrace, and it is a national disgrace that the administration and its Secretary of Health have not made health policy their highest domestic priority.

As the figures will show, smoking is one small part of the black health disaster. Secretary Sullivan has picked up the battle that Surgeon General Koop so well started, and that is good. But it is a tiny part of the total problem. Secretary Sullivan has proposed new initiatives for work on minority health initiatives. But the amount budgeted for that program is rounded to zero in the larger health picture. Indeed, the administration proposed to spend more on extra and—according to GAO—unnecessary payments to HMO's than they proposed to spend on the Secretary's initiative.

The numbers are so grim, that if I were Secretary of HHS, I would spend every working day trying to get better health care to the Nation's uninsured and under insured people who are disproportionately minorities. And if the Office of Management and Budget ignored my cries and proceed to cut key budgets in the health field, I would resign as a matter of principle.

There was a book written about the failure of the West in World War II to act to save European Jewry, and it shows that even though we knew what was going on, we were silent. It is called "While Six Million Died."

We know what is going on in the life and death of those in our society without health insurance. Why are we silent?

Failure to make this a battle of principle, is really to turn one's head while thousands die needlessly and millions endure shortened lives and unnecessary tragedy.

Is the lust for office in our society so overwhelming, that otherwise good people look the other way and mouth support for further cuts in health care for the uninsured and poor? That they would oppose every effort to extend health insurance coverage to some of the 60-plus million Americans who are without health care during some part of every year?

No one can read the following statistics and not feel that it is a national disgrace to remain silent on this Government neglect.

The memo follows; I would just note that the data compares blacks with Caucasians; similar disparities occur between Caucasians and the other minority groups in our society.

1. Infant mortality:

Infant mortality for Blacks is twice that of whites—17.9 per 1,000 for Blacks vs 8.6 for whites.

Between 1980 and 1987, white infant mortality fell by 22 percent while Black infant mortality fell by only 16 percent.

Blacks living in the District of Columbia have an infant mortality rate that is higher than many nations.

Blacks in DC, 23.5.

Chile, 19.1.

Costa Rica, 17.8.

Poland, 17.5.

2. Life expectancy:

White life expectancy at birth is 6 years longer than Blacks.

Death rates for Black males are: 27 percent higher from heart disease, 44 percent higher from cancer, 92 percent higher for diabetes, 3 times as high for AIDS, and 7 times as high for homicides.

3. Risk factors:

Vaccination rates for Blacks are ⅓ lower than for whites, 50 percent of Blacks have hypertension, 40 percent of whites; 38 percent of Blacks are overweight; 25 percent of whites; 39 percent of Black males smoke, compared to only 30 percent of white males.

4. Health status:

42 percent of whites rate their health as "excellent" compared to only 28 percent of Blacks; 8 percent of whites rate their health as "fair or poor", compared to 16 percent of Blacks.

5. Use of physicians:

Whites have more physician visits per year: Average of 5.5/yr compared to 4.8/yr; whites usually see physicians in their offices; 60 percent of visits for whites compared to 50 percent for Blacks.

Blacks are twice as likely to rely on emergency rooms and hospital outpatient departments; 22 percent of visits compared to 11 percent.

Whites have twice as many dental visits per year as Blacks. Only 6 percent of medical students are Black, compared to 12 percent of total population.

6. Insurance status:

23 percent of Blacks under age 65 are uninsured; only 14 percent of whites; Blacks more likely to be dependent on Medicaid, 17 percent of Blacks; 4 percent of whites.

7. President's FY 91 budget proposed to spend more on "overpaying" HMOs than on Sullivan's minority health initiative: $180 million for HMOs vs. $117 million for minority initiative.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. PARRIS] is recognized for 5 minutes.

COMMUNICATION FROM THE CHAIRMAN OF THE COMMITTEE ON THE BUDGET REGARDING CURRENT LEVEL OF SPENDING AND REVENUES FOR FISCAL YEAR 1990

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from California [Mr. PANETTA] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. PANETTA. Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the Committee on the Budget and as chairman of the Committee on the Budget, pursuant to the procedures of the Committee on the Budget and section 311 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, as amended, I am submitting for printing in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD the official letter to the Speaker advising him of the current level of spending, credit, and revenues for fiscal year 1990. This is the 3d report of the 2d session of the 101st Congress.

The term "current level" refers to the estimated amount of budget authority, outlays, credit authority, and revenues that are available—or will be used—for the full fiscal year in question based only on enacted law.

Current level reports are intended to provide Members information to compare enacted spending and revenues with the aggregate ceilings on budget authority, outlays, and revenues established in a budget resolution, and also to compare enacted legislation with the allocations of new discretionary budget authority, entitlement authority, and credit authority made to a committee pursuant to subsection 302(a) of the Budget Act. This report compares the spending, credit, and revenue levels in current level with those assumed in the budget resolution for fiscal year 1990 (House Concurrent Resolution 106), adopted on May 18, 1989.

Current level reports provide information that is necessary for enforcing section 311 of the Budget Act. Section 311(a) prohibits the consideration of a spending or revenue measure if the adoption of that measure would cause the ceiling on total new budget authority or total outlays set in the budget resolution for a fiscal year to be exceeded or would cause revenues to be less than the appropriate level of revenues set forth in the budget resolution.

Section 311(b) provides an exception to the 311(a) point of order for measures that would breach the ceilings on total spending set forth in the budget resolution but would not cause a committee to exceed its "appropriate allocation" of discretionary spending made pursuant to section 302(a) of the Budget Act. Such an exception was first provided by the budget resolution for fiscal year 1985 (House Concurrent Resolution 280, 98th Congress). The exception was made permanent by the amendments to the Budget Act included in the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985 (Public Law 99-177, Gramm-Rudman-Hollings). This exception is intended to protect a committee that has stayed within its allocation of discretionary budget authority and new entitlement authority from points of order if the total spending ceilings have been breached for reasons outside of its control. For fiscal year 1990, the 302(a) allocations to House committees made pursuant to the conference report on House Concurrent Resolution 106 were printed in House Report 101-50, May 18, 1989.

Section 311(c) of the Budget Act provides that, for purposes of enforcing section 311, the levels of new budget authority, entitlement authority, outlays, and revenues shall be determined on the basis of estimates made by the Committee on the Budget. Current level reports represent partial fulfillment of this enforcement responsibility of the Budget Committee by providing both estimates of enacted aggregate spending and revenues, and, for purposes of determining the applicability of the section 311(b) exception, estimates of the relationship between the budgetary effect of enacted legislation within a committee's jurisdiction and the allocation of spending authority made to that committee.

The estimates in this report are based on economic and technical assumptions in place at the time of the adoption of the budget resolution, House Concurrent Resolution 106, on May 18, 1989. This is intended to protect committees which acted on the basis of the assumptions of the budget resolution from changes in economic and technical factors over which they have no control. Unless the Congress adopts a subsequent budget resolution for a fiscal year that alters the assumptions concerning legislative actions, committees should be able to expect that measures that conform with the budget resolution will not be subject to points of order for violation of the Budget Act. To do otherwise and base enforcement on constantly changing economic and technical estimates would seriously disrupt the legislative process, penalize committees that are unable to complete work on legislation within a short period after adoption of a budget resolution, and undermine respect for budget enforcement procedures.

In addition to section 311, the Budget Act contains another point of order that requires Budget Committee estimates for enforcement. Section 302(f)(1) of the Budget Act prohibits the consideration of a measure providing new budget authority, new entitlement authority, or new credit authority if the adoption of that measure would cause a committee to exceed its allocation of new spending or credit authority made pursuant to subsection 302(b) of the Budget Act. The 302(b) allocation is a subdivision of the new spending, new entitlement, and new credit authority allocated to a committee pursuant to section 302(a), among either the subcommittees of that committee or among programs over which the committee has jurisdiction. This point of order was added to the Budget Act by the amendments included in the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985.

Section 302(g) provides that the enforcement of section 302 shall be based on estimates of spending and credit authority made by the Committee on the Budget. The Budget Committee fulfills this responsibility by providing, as necessary, a separate section 302 status report to the Speaker.

For information purposes only, current level reports will continue to include a comparison of the budget and credit authority divided among the Appropriations subcommittees by that committee's 302(b) division with the actual enacted spending and credit legislation within each subcommittee's jurisdiction.

As chairman of the Budget Committee, I intend to keep the House informed regularly on the status of the current level.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
COMMITTEE ON THE BUDGET,
Washington, DC, August 1, 1990.

Hon. THOMAS S. FOLEY,
Speaker, House of Representatives,
Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. SPEAKER: On January 30, 1976, the Committee on the Budget outlined the procedure which it had adopted in connection with its responsibilities under Section 311 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, as amended, to provide estimates of the current level of revenues and spending.

I am herewith transmitting the status report under H. Con. Res. 106, the Concurrent Resolution on the Budget for Fiscal Year 1990.

In the House of Representatives, the procedural situation with regard to the spending ceilings (total new budget authority and total outlays) and the revenue floor is affected by Section 311 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, as amended by P.L. 99-177. Section 311(a) prohibits the consideration of a spending or revenue measure which would cause the ceiling on total new budget authority or total outlays set in the budget resolution for a fiscal year to be exceeded or would cause total revenues to be less than the appropriate level set in the budget resolution. Section 311(b) provides an exception to the 311(a) point of order for measures which would breach the ceilings on total spending in the budget resolution but would not cause a committee to exceed its "appropriate allocation" of new discretionary budget authority or new entitlement authority under Section 302(a) of the Budget Act.

The intent of Section 311(b) of the Budget Act is to protect a committee that has stayed within its spending authority allocations—new discretionary budget authority or new entitlement authority—from points of order if the total spending ceilings have been breached for reasons outside of its control. The 302(a) allocations to House committees made pursuant to the conference report on H. Con. Res. 106 were printed in the joint explanatory statement of the Committee of Conference in H. Rept. 101-50. (May 15, 1989).

The enclosed tables compare enacted legislation to each committee's 302(a) allocation of discretionary budget authority, new entitlement authority, new direct loan obligations and new primary loan guarantee commitments. The estimates of spending and revenues for purposes of the application of points of order under the Budget Act are based upon the economic and technical assumptions underlying the fiscal year 1990 budget resolution, H. Con. Res. 106.

Sincerely,

LEON E. PANETTA,
Chairman.

RE-HIRE QUALIFIED AIR TRAFFIC CONTROLLERS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from New York [Mr. HOCHBRUECKNER] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. HOCHBRUECKNER. Mr. Speaker, today, August 3, 1990 marks the ninth anniversary of President Reagan's decision to fire 11,400 air traffic controllers who were participation in the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization [PATCO] strike. Today, air traffic controllers at the Washington Air Route Traffic Control Center in Leesburg, VA are picketing to protest the continued critical shortage of full performance level [FPL] controllers at many of the Nation's busiest air traffic control facilities.

I am introducing legislation today which can address the problem of our severe shortage of fully trained air traffic controllers in the quickest and most cost-effective manner possible. My legislation would require the rehiring of 1,000 former air traffic controllers over the next 2 years. Identical legislation was passed by the House on March 30, 1988 by a vote of 234 to 180. Thirty-six of my colleagues, from both sides of the aisle, are joining me as original cosponsors of this legislation. This legislation is not a blanket rehire; however, it would allow these highly qualified and experienced individuals to compete competitively for new controller positions in the FAA.

While over the past 9 years the Federal Aviation Administration [FAA] has been able to restore the number of air traffic controllers to close to its prestrike level, the FAA is still far below the necessary number of FPL controllers. FPL controllers are the only ones who are fully qualified to operate all positions in a defined area. Prior to 1981, the FAA air traffic controller work force included 13,000 FPLs. By August 31, 1987, the number of FPL's was 9,695. This year, the FAA has just over 10,000 FPL's. Meanwhile, the number of flight operations handled by air traffic controllers has increased 20 percent from 66.7 million flight operations in 1981 to 80.4 million 1989.

Increased air traffic combined with an overworked and understaffed corp of air traffic controllers has resulted in an overburdened system in which flight delays are the rule rather than the exception. The lack of fully trained controllers is especially severe at our Nation's busiest airports. Incidents such as the recent Avianca Airlines' crash in Cove Neck, NY, illustrate the hazards of not having available a sufficient number of fully trained air traffic controllers.

Maintaining order throughout the hectic, crowded skies of our Nation is a complicated and highly stressful job. It is a job which demands special talents and training to perform properly. As the volume of air traffic continues to increase, it is urgent that the FAA be equipped to handle this traffic in a safe, efficient and cost-effective manner. While it takes an average of 3 to 4 years to fully certify a developmental controller to FPL status, it has been estimated that recertification of former controllers could be accomplished in as little as 3 to 6 months.

The National Air Traffic Controllers Association [NATCA] supports allowing controllers fired in the 1981 strike to be rehired on a competitive basis. The legislation I am introducing today can make available 1,000 individuals with the proven ability and dedication to help manage the Nation's air traffic. I hope that the House will be able to consider this legislation in September so that we can restore the number of FPL controllers to an appropriate level as soon as possible.

THE 97TH ANNIVERSARY OF BIRTH OF WRIGHT PATMAN

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. GONZALEZ] is recognized for 60 minutes.

Mr. GONZALEZ. Mr. Speaker, next Monday, we mark the 97th anniversary of the birth of one of the giants of this institution—Wright Patman.

Wright Patman has been dead for 14 years, but his influence is still felt in the Banking Committee, in the House, and among what he liked to call the "plain people" of the Nation—the little people. Patman was fond of telling us that the big boys—the bankers and the business establishment—had their representatives—the lobbyists—on a permanent full-time detail in Washington. It was the Congress' job, Wright reminded his colleagues constantly, to represent the people.

It was good advice often repeated during his 48 years in the House of Representatives.

When Wright Patman died on March 7, 1976, the New York Times noted:

> To Wright Patman, the root of all evil was the concentration of economic power in the hands of a small number of bankers, business executives and government officials. He spent his life trying to expose the evils and restrict the power and his record contained many successes and many failures. His tenacity in fighting those who he felt had too much power was legendary. His critics called it "pigheadedness". His charges and proposals were ignored over and over by his colleagues in Congress, but he would come back the next week, the next month, the next year with the same charges and the same plans. He lived to see many of the ideas embodied in law and many others, originally denounced as far out, become a standard part of the platform of liberal Democrats everywhere.

Patman was involved in a wide ranging array of legislation, investigations, and studies—credit unions, small business, full employment, bank regulation, numerous anticoncentration, antiinterlock, antimonopoly efforts, impeachment proceedings against Secretary of the Treasury Andrew Mellon, the ultimate resignation of Mellon, the World War I veterans bonus, passed as an economic pump-priming legislation over three Presidential vetoes, the first investigation of the Watergate scandal and the movement of the coverup money through the banking system.

This list is long. As the old Washington Star once commented:

> A flood of studies, reports and educational materials poured from the Committee and its enthusiastic staff. He became a public educator of the people of money and banking, and his studies of conflicts and financial interlocks radiated sunshine into long-darkened corridors of the powerful money centers.

But, for all the studies, investigations and legislation, Wright Patman will best be remembered for one thing—his life-time battle against high interest rates, tight money and the Federal Reserve. He saw the Federal Reserve not as a manager, but a manipulator of monetary policy—manipulation for the benefit of the big banks and the big business establishment to the detriment of the home buyer, the worker, the consumer.

High interest rates, he correctly argued, prices people out of homes, eliminates opportunities for small businesses, and puts millions of workers out of jobs.

Patman was always concerned that high interest rates were taking an inordinate portion of the national budget, transferring wealth from the ordinary taxpayer to the banks and the wealthy who purchased the Government debt.

He would have been appalled at President Bush's current budget which contains $175 billion just to pay interest on the debt—a whopping 15 percent of the total Federal outlays—and a rising number.

Wright Patman was on the floor often to protest high interest rates. Here are some of his comments when interest rates went up in the late 1960's—typical of his philosophy:

> This action of forcing higher and higher interest rates on the American people, if not stopped, will lead to the worst depression in our history, bringing along with it massive unemployment, sheriff sales, and bankruptcy.
> The biggest bankers in the nation who make the most money from high interest rates are in charge of our monetary policy. Certainly the people who profit from high interest rates should not be allowed to fix the interest rates at higher and higher levels, but this is in fact what is happening.
> Inflation is given as the cause of these higher interest rates but our own history indicates that the higher interest rates go, the more inflation there is. Inflation cannot be stopped by creating more inflation through higher interest rates.
> Stopping inflation with higher interest is about as effective as putting out a fire with gasoline.

SOME GRANDFATHERLY ADVICE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from California [Mr. DORNAN] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. DORNAN of California. Mr. Speaker, it is 15 minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The order in front of the Chair is for 5 minutes.

If the gentleman wishes to proceed for 15 minutes, and there is no objection, it is granted.

There was no objection.

Mr. DORNAN of California. Mr. Speaker, I was first sworn into this House on January 4, 1977, and I have served under three Speakers. I have had excellent relations with all three, friendly, cordial, professional, and with the longest relationship, a decade with the inestimable Tip O'Neill of Massachusetts, a somewhat warm relationship due to a shared Irish heritage.

I came across a passage in his book, "A Man of the House" which were the last words I heard him speak in this Chamber when he bid adieu to all his colleagues.

He said, "I will always remain a man of the House," hence the title of that book.

There was something in that book that haunted me during that painful and tortuous ethics debate that we had a week ago yesterday in this Chamber. I would like to refresh everybody's memory by reading from "A Man of the House" published by Random House, on page 216. It was about a long-standing Member from the great State of Presidents, the State of Ohio, Wayne Hays and the ethics problems that he got into that caused the termination of his career here in Congress, although he was born again back to the legislature in Ohio as a State senator.

The former Speaker, Tip O'Neill, writes:

There was no way that someone with Hays' personality would ever be elected Majority Leader——

At this point Mr. O'Neill was already majority leader. He says:

When Wayne Hays resigned from Congress, most of us were delighted to see him go. It was Hays, of course, who hired Elizabeth Ray as a secretary who worked for the House Administration Committee and was paid $14,000 a year, even though she couldn't type or file. In May of 1976 she got her boss in real trouble when she told two reporters from the Washington Post that her real job was to be his girlfriend. I was Majority Leader at the time and when the story broke, Carl Albert and I were on a plane to London to pick up the Magna Carta—— which was being loaned to the United States for the Bicentennial. By the time we landed in London, the news was all over the world. As soon as I returned to Washington, Congressman Hayes came in to see me.

This magnificent document was in the Rotunda when I arrived as a freshman a few months later.

"I have been to see the Speaker and he says we can forget about this whole thing, that the leadership can let me off with a warning."

"No way," I replied. "You have disgraced the Congress and you have got to resign your chairmanships.

"But Carl said it would be all right."

Now, Carl's problem——

Mr. O'Neill writes—

was that he said yes to everybody.

"It may be all right with the Speaker" I told Hays, "but it's not all right with me. If you don't resign, I am going to bring this business before the Caucus and we will strip you of your chairmanships on the spot."

Not surprisingly, Wayne Hays chose to resign.

Now, I do not know if we have different standards in this Chamber than when I came here, but I am going to use an Irish device first brought to notoriety in the English-speaking world by the great Irish writer, Jonathan Swift, the author of Gulliver's Travels and other great political stories disguised in satire, so I am going to use just a bit of satire here in my last talk to my colleagues before we take this break, Mr. Speaker. I am going to speak with some grandfatherly advice, because God willing, the first week of August, that is the week we are in, I am supposed to become a grandfather for the eighth time. My older son, Bob Jr., is expecting a little girl or boy before the 10th of August. If it is a girl it will be probably Catherine Octavia Dornan, Kate O'Dornan. If it is a boy, we have not really talked about it, but I would be honored if it were Robert Kenneth Patrick Dornan, III.

Now, let me as the father of eight grandchildren to give some grandfatherly advice to the heterosexual Members of this Congress.

My male and female colleagues who are heterosexuals, here is the advice: If during this break you are tempted to pick up some of the salacious heterosexual pornographic literature around this country available on street corners unfortunately in my State, resist any Henry Higgins urge for that Pygmalion desire to redeem Eliza Doolittle. Do not take any prostitutes or gigolos home, put them on any salary, Federal as Wayne Hays did or private, and expect that a terrible scandal will not befall you.

Human nature being what it is, if you keep them around for 18 months, you are going to find yourself involved beyond your depth. Do not think the Ethics Committee will show any mercy to you, my fellow heterosexuals, if you get so deeply into a scandal that you are fixing parking tickets, that you are telling lies on official stationery to people that maybe are supposed to watch the conduct of some of these prostitutes, and heaven forbid if one of them has been involved in a scandal involving child pornography or has dealt in drugs, the curse of our time, our generation in this country, because the Ethics Committee will not allow you to apologize and cop a plea that in some way society made you do this. That will not fly for any of the heterosexuals in this House, and you will probably be, as Wayne Hays was, forced to leave this Chamber, and if you are on the outside, here are the professions you will not be able to pursue.

This thought came to me when several of our Hill police officers said,

Congressman, if I were involved in any kind of scandals that I have seen here over the last few years, any one of us on this Hill, any of the male or female police officers would be fired before the Sun set.

That was said to me by a police officer right outside that east door.

Now, I asked my staff to put together some professions that they think any one of us busted out of this distinguished legislative body would not be able to pursue. Then I had a staffer put them all in alphabetical order. It starts off with airline cockpit crews. Do not think if you leave here even if you were young enough you could enter the staff of any airline in the world. Of course, you cannot be an astronaut, could not be an accountant, if bonded. You would not be selected as an ambassador to any country in the world. You would not be accepted on the board of directors of the American Bar Association. You would not be an anchorman or woman, radio, television, any station in this country or Europe. If you are in the armed services and you were commissioned, you get a dishonorable discharge. If you were a reservist here, the same if you were enlisted or an NCO or reservist, of course, and you would not be hired by the Attorney General for any position in the Justice Department, top to bottom. You could not be a baseball club owner in any of the major leagues or minors. You could not be a Big Brother. You could not give blood. You could not fly with the Blue Angels or the Thunderbirds, but then you could not be an officer, but then you could not be in the military at all. You would not get appointed to any Cabinet posts or any confirmable position in the U.S. Government at all. You could not be a candy striper at a hospital; could not be the CEO of any Fortune 500 company. I mentioned that on the floor here recently. You could not be a child-care provider; could not be a child photographer, oh, you could open a store, but you would not have any clients. You could not be a CIA agent or a DEA agent, could not be a city manager anywhere in the country. You could not be a congressional staffer if the Congressman was on Armed Services or the Intelligence Committee, because you would never get a security clearance, so do not think you will come back here that way. You could not be a district attorney anywhere in the country. You could not be a dogcatcher out there in the heartland even in most of California. You could not be a drug czar. You could not get Father of the Year award; you could not get Mother of the Year award; could not be an FBI agent, a fireman, could not be a high-school coach or principal of a high school or any officer position; probably could not sit on most school boards, a member of the House of Commons or the House of Lords, or most parliaments of the world. It seems I mentioned that. So do not go to England. You could not be a journalist. Ben Bradlee certainly would not hire you. You could not work as a judge at any level, could not clerk at the Supreme Court, and do not expect to get nominated for a Supreme Court position. Remember what happened to the circuit court justice Doug Ginsberg for smoking merely some marijuana cigarettes as a law professor. You could not join the Kiwanis, the Elks, Sertoma, Rotary or the masonic lodge. You could not be a little league coach. You could not be Mayor of Washington, even though that is opening up soon, or mayor anywhere. You could not be a medical student. Yes, a Pygmalion attempt gone awry will deny you entry into medical school even in Grenada or Mexico. You cannot be a meter maid, a missionary to Asia or Africa or anywhere else, a parole officer, a pediatrician, but you could probably set up office but parents would not bring their children to you, and I repeat, police officer, sheriff anywhere that I know, prison guard, rabbinical studies would be denied to you, Christian seminary training would be denied to you. And notice the Pygmalion problem with the distinguished archbishop of my faith down in Atlanta.

You cannot be the Republican national chairman, a school nurse, a scoutmaster. You cannot have a security position at the Department of Defense, because it would require a security clearance. You could not be a sportsman-president—think of Misters Rose and Steinbrenner—or a university president.

And I close again in the clouds, you could not be a steward or stewardess at any airline.

I am not being sarcastic, my colleagues, Mr. Speaker, about these professions. I would say to my heterosexual brothers and sisters, be careful how you conduct yourself out there during this break. It is a district work period. Do not bring disgrace upon this Chamber, and if you think you can run for reelection and get elected again, you can. And if you are qualified to serve, over 25, an American citizen, naturalized or born, there is a third leg to that stool to serve here, and it is in the Constitution. Look it up during the break. This body, both Houses, shall be the judge of their Members.

And that is what we forget sometimes when people take this well and say leave it to the voters. If I may be so bold, in the Jonathan Swift tradition, may I give some advice to my homosexual colleagues in this House. There is no such thing as safe sex. We have already buried one Member who died of AIDS. Try celibacy. It tends to build character.

I thank the Speaker. I yield back the balance of my time. Have a good district work period.

BREAST AND CERVICAL CANCER MORTALITY PREVENTION ACT OF 1990

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H.R. 4790) to amend the Public Health Service Act to establish a program of grants for the detection and control of breast and cervical cancer, with a Senate amendment thereto, and concur in the Senate amendment.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the Senate amendment, as follows:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Breast and Cervical Cancer Mortality Prevention Act of 1990".

SEC. 2. ESTABLISHMENT OF PROGRAM OF GRANTS TO STATES FOR PREVENTION AND CONTROL OF BREAST AND CERVICAL CANCER.

The Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 201 et seq.) is amended by inserting after title XIV the following new title:

"TITLE XV—PREVENTIVE HEALTH MEASURES WITH RESPECT TO BREAST AND CERVICAL CANCERS

"SEC. 1501. ESTABLISHMENT OF PROGRAM OF GRANTS TO STATES.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary, acting through the Director of the Centers for Disease Control, may make grants to States on the basis of an established competitive review process for the purpose of carrying out programs—

"(1) to screen women for breast and cervical cancer as a preventive health measure;

"(2) to provide appropriate referrals for medical treatment of women screened pursuant to paragraph (1) and to ensure, to the extent practicable, the provision of appropriate follow-up services;

"(3) to develop and disseminate public information and education programs for the detection and control of breast and cervical cancer;

"(4) to improve the education, training, and skills of health professionals (including allied health professionals) in the detection and control of breast and cervical cancer;

"(5) to establish mechanisms through which the States can monitor the quality of screening procedures for breast and cervical cancer, including the interpretation of such procedures; and

"(6) to evaluate activities conducted under paragraphs (1) through (5) through appropriate surveillance or program-monitoring activities.

"(b) GRANT AND CONTRACT AUTHORITY OF STATES.—A State receiving a grant under subsection (a) may expend the grant to carry out the purpose described in such subsection through grants to, and contracts with, public or nonprofit private entities.

"SEC. 1502. REQUIREMENT OF MATCHING FUNDS.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary may not make a grant under section 1501 unless the State involved agrees, with respect to the costs to be incurred by the State in carrying out the purpose described in such section, to make available non-Federal contributions (in cash or in kind under subsection (b)) toward such costs in an amount equal to not less than $1 for each $3 of Federal funds provided in the grant. Such contributions may be made directly or through donations from public or private entities.

"(b) DETERMINATION OF AMOUNT OF NON-FEDERAL CONTRIBUTION.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Non-Federal contributions required in subsection (a) may be in cash or in kind, fairly evaluated, including equipment or services (and excluding indirect or overhead costs). Amounts provided by the Federal Government, or services assisted or subsidized to any significant extent by the Federal Government, may not be included in determining the amount of such non-Federal contributions.

"(2) MAINTENANCE OF EFFORT.—In making a determination of the amount of non-Federal contributions for purposes of subsection (a), the Secretary may include only non-Federal contributions in excess of the average amount of non-Federal contributions made by the State involved toward the purpose described in section 1501 for the 2-year period preceding the first fiscal year for which the State is applying to receive a grant under such section.

"(3) INCLUSION OF RELEVANT NON-FEDERAL CONTRIBUTIONS FOR MEDICAID.—In making a determination of the amount of non-Federal contributions for purposes of subsection (a), the Secretary shall, subject to paragraphs (1) and (2) of this subsection, include any non-Federal amounts expended pursuant to title XIX of the Social Security Act by the State involved toward the purpose described in paragraphs (1) and (2) of section 1501(a).

"SEC. 1503. REQUIREMENTS WITH RESPECT TO TYPE AND QUALITY OF SERVICES.

"(a) REQUIREMENT OF PROVISION OF ALL SERVICES BY DATE CERTAIN.—The Secretary may not make a grant under section 1501 unless the State involved agrees—

"(1) to ensure that, initially and throughout the period during which amounts are received pursuant to the grant, not less than 60 percent of the grant is expended to provide each of the services or activities described in paragraphs (1) and (2) of section 1501(a), including making available screening procedures for both breast and cervical cancers;

"(2) subject to subsection (b), to ensure that—

"(A) in the case of breast cancer, both a physical examination of the breasts and the screening procedure known as a mammography are conducted; and

"(B) in the case of cervical cancer, both a pelvic examination and the screening procedure known as a pap smear are conducted;

"(3) to ensure that, by the end of any second fiscal year of payments pursuant to the grant, each of the services or activities described in section 1501(a) is provided; and

"(4) to ensure that not more than 40 percent of the grant is expended to provide the services or activities described in paragraphs (3) through (6) of such section.

"(b) USE OF IMPROVED SCREENING PROCEDURES.—The Secretary may not make a grant under section 1501 unless the State involved agrees that, if any screening procedure superior to a procedure described in subsection (a)(2) becomes commonly available and is recommended for use, any entity providing screening procedures pursuant to the grant will utilize the superior procedure rather than the procedure described in such subsection.

"(c) QUALITY ASSURANCE REGARDING SCREENING FOR BREAST CANCER.—The Secretary may not make a grant under section 1501 unless the State involved agrees that the State will assure the quality of any screening procedure for breast cancer conducted pursuant to such section and, in the case of mammography, will provide that—

"(1) the equipment used to perform the mammography will be specifically designed for mammography and will meet appropriate radiologic standards for mammography;

"(2) the mammography will be performed by an individual who—

"(A) is licensed by a State to perform radiological procedures; or

"(B) is certified as qualified to perform radiological procedures by an appropriate organization;

"(3) the results of the mammography will be interpreted by a physician who—

"(A) is certified as qualified to interpret radiological procedures by an appropriate board; or

"(B) is certified as qualified to interpret screening mammography procedures by an appropriate program for assuring the qualifications of the individual with respect to such interpretations; and

"(4) with respect to the first screening mammography performed on a woman for which payment is made pursuant to section 1501(a), there are satisfactory assurances that the results of the mammography will be placed in permanent medical records maintained with respect to the woman.

"(d) QUALITY ASSURANCE REGARDING SCREENING FOR CERVICAL CANCER.—The Secretary may not make a grant under section 1501 unless the State involved agrees that the State will assure the quality of any screening procedure for cervical cancer conducted pursuant to such section and, in the case of the pap smear (or other cytological screening procedure replacing the pap smear pursuant to subsection (b)), will provide—

"(1) the maximum number of cytology slides that any individual may screen in a 24-hour period;

"(2) requirements that a clinical laboratory maintain a record of—

"(A) the number of cytology slides screened during each 24-hour period by each individual who examines cytology slides for the laboratory; and

"(B) the number of hours devoted during each 24-hour period to screening cytology slides by such individual;

"(3) criteria for requiring rescreening of cytological preparations, such as—

"(A) random rescreening of cytology specimens determined to be in the benign category;

"(B) focused rescreening of such preparations in high risk groups; and

"(C) for each abnormal cytological result, rescreening of all prior cytological specimens for the patient, if available;

"(4) periodic confirmation and evaluation of the proficiency of individuals involved in screening or interpreting cytological preparations, including announced and unannounced on-site proficiency testing of such individuals, with such testing to take place, to the extent practicable, under normal working conditions;

"(5) procedures for detecting inadequately prepared slides, for assuring that no cytological diagnosis is rendered on such slides, and for notifying referring physicians of such slides;

"(6) requirements that all cytological screening be done on the premises of an appropriately qualified laboratory;

"(7) requirements for the retention of cytology slides by laboratories for appropriate periods of time; and

"(8) requirements of periodic inspection of cytology services by persons capable of evaluating the quality of cytology services.

"(e) ISSUANCE BY SECRETARY OF GUIDELINES WITH RESPECT TO QUALITY OF MAMMOGRAPHY AND CYTOLOGICAL SERVICES.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall establish guidelines for assuring the quality of any mammography and cytological screening procedure conducted pursuant to section 1501(a). Such guidelines with respect to mammography shall include the provisions of paragraphs (1) through (4) of subsection (c), and such guidelines with respect to cytological screening procedures shall include the provisions of paragraphs (1) through (8) of subsection (d).

"(2) APPLICABILITY WITH RESPECT TO GRANTS.—The Secretary may not make a grant under section 1501 unless the State involved agrees that the State will, with respect to any mammography or cytological screening procedure conducted pursuant to such section, ensure that the procedure is conducted in accordance with the guidelines issued by the Secretary under paragraph (1).

"(3) RESPONSIBILITY OF STATES IN ABSENCE OF GUIDELINES.—With respect to circumstances in which a State receives a grant under section 1501 before the issuance of guidelines under paragraph (1), this subsection may not be construed to affect in such circumstances the obligation of the State pursuant to subsection (a)(1) to provide for screening procedures and referrals or the obligations under subsections (c) and (d) with respect to providing for quality in the screening procedures.

"SEC. 1504. ADDITIONAL REQUIRED AGREEMENTS.

"(a) PRIORITY FOR LOW-INCOME WOMEN.—The Secretary may not make a grant under section 1501 unless the State involved agrees that low-income women will be given priority in the provision of services and activities pursuant to paragraphs (1) and (2) of section 1501(a).

"(b) LIMITATION ON IMPOSITION OF FEES FOR SERVICES.—The Secretary may not make a grant under section 1501 unless the State involved agrees that, if a charge is imposed for the provision of services or activities under the grant, such charge—

"(1) will be made according to a schedule of charges that is made available to the public;

"(2) will be adjusted to reflect the income of the woman involved; and

"(3) will not be imposed on any woman with an income of less than 100 percent of the official poverty line, as established by the Director of the Office of Management and Budget and revised by the Secretary in accordance with section 673(2) of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1981.

"(c) STATEWIDE PROVISION OF SERVICES.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary may not make a grant under section 1501 unless the State involved agrees that services and activities under the grant will be made available throughout the State, including availability to members of any Indian tribe or tribal organization (as such terms are defined in section 4 of the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act).

"(2) WAIVER.—The Secretary may waive the requirement established in paragraph (1) for a State if the Secretary determines that compliance by the State with the requirement would result in an inefficient allocation of resources with respect to carrying out the purpose described in section 1501(a).

"(d) RELATIONSHIP TO ITEMS AND SERVICES UNDER OTHER PROGRAMS.—The Secretary may not make a grant under section 1501 unless the State involved agrees that the grant will not be expended to make payment for any item or service to the extent that payment has been made, or can reasonably be expected to be made, with respect to such item or service—

"(1) under any State compensation program, under an insurance policy, or under any Federal or State health benefits program; or

"(2) by an entity that provides health services on a prepaid basis.

(e) COORDINATION WITH OTHER BREAST AND CERVICAL CANCER PROGRAMS.—The Secretary may not make a grant under section 1501 unless the State involved agrees that the services and activities funded through the grant shall be coordinated with other Federal, State, and local breast and cervical cancer programs.

"(f) LIMITATION ON ADMINISTRATIVE EXPENSES.—The Secretary may not make a grant under section 1501 unless the State involved agrees that not more than 10 percent of the grant will be expended for administrative expenses with respect to the grant.

"(g) RESTRICTIONS ON USE OF GRANT.—The Secretary may not make a grant under section 1501 unless the State involved agrees that the grant will not be expended to provide inpatient hospital services for any individual.

"(h) RECORDS AND AUDITS.—The Secretary may not make a grant under section 1501 unless the State involved agrees that—

"(1) the State will establish such fiscal control and fund accounting procedures as may be necessary to ensure the proper disbursal of, and accounting for, amounts received by the State under such section; and

"(2) upon request, the State will provide records maintained pursuant to paragraph (1) to the Secretary or the Comptroller of the United States for purposes of auditing the expenditures by the State of the grant.

"(i) REPORTS TO SECRETARY.—The Secretary may not make a grant under section 1501 unless the State involved agrees to submit to the Secretary such reports as the Secretary may require with respect to the grant.

"SEC. 1505. DESCRIPTION OF INTENDED USES OF GRANT.

"The Secretary may not make a grant under section 1501 unless—

"(1) the State involved submits to the Secretary a description of the purposes for which the State intends to expend the grant;

"(2) the description identifies the populations, areas, and localities in the State with a need for the services or activities described in section 1501(a);

"(3) the description provides information relating to the services and activities to be provided, including a description of the manner in which the services and activities will be coordinated with any similar services or activities of public or nonprivate entities; and

Mr. WAXMAN (during the reading). Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate amendment be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. NAGLE). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

Mr. LENT. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, and I will not object, I make this reservation for the purpose of asking the gentleman from California if he would explain the Senate amendment to the legislation.

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LENT. Further reserving the right to object, I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Speaker, this legislation has enjoyed strong bipartisan support from the beginning. My distinguished colleagues, the ranking minority member of the subcommittee, Mr. MADIGAN, the chairman of the committee, Mr. DINGELL, and the ranking minority member of the committee, Mr. LENT, are original sponsors of the legislation. It passed the House on suspension by voice vote on June 18. It passed the Senate today with a small amendment by unanimous consent.

The Senate has made only minor amendments to the bill, generally having to do with the distribution of grants among the States. With respect to such grants, it our understanding that the Centers for Disease Control has traditionally awarded grants in a manner that distributes funds equitably among the principal geographic regions of the United States. Further, it is our understanding that CDC takes into account the severity of the problems that the grants are meant to address and the availability of existing services to deal with such problems. It is our intention that, in making grants under this new program, CDC will continue to follow these practices.

I urge all Members to support H.R. 4790.

A few weeks ago, thousands of people gathered for a marathon race that was to call attention symbolically to the "Race for the Cure" to breast cancer. Today, it is necessary for the Congress to take an important step to make the prevention and treatment of such cancer a reality.

H.R. 4790 would establish a new State grants program within the Public Health Service Act to provide preventive mammography and Pap smear screening services for low-income women for the early detection of breast and cervical cancer. In addition, this program would support public information activities relating to the detection and control of breast and cervical cancer; in-service education for health care providers; and quality control standards for mammography and Pap smear screening procedures.

At our hearings on this legislation last month, Marilyn Tucker Quayle, the wife of the Vice President, came before the subcommittee "to declare all-out war against the tragedy of breast cancer." I think all of us share Mrs. Quayle's concern that we have waited far too long in addressing this major public health problem. I believe H.R. 4790 will help us finally to mobilize our public health forces and to win our war against both breast and cervical cancer.

Mr. LENT. Mr. Speaker, further reserving the right to object.

Last year an estimated 43,000 women died from breast cancer and 6,000 died from cervical cancer. Many of these women died because they did not have access to early screening, and their cancers were not discovered until it was too late. H.R. 4790 attempts to prevent this situation and reduce the mortality from breast and cervical cancer.

□ 0330

The bill is an important public health measure, and I urge all Members to join me in supporting it.

Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. NAGLE). Is there objection to the initial request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

IDENTIFICATION NUMBER

Is this an Amendment? ☐ YES ☐ NO

NOTE on ITEM "A".—(a) IN GENERAL. This "Report" form may be used by either an organization or an individual, as follows:

(i) "Employee".—To file as an "employee", state (in Item "B") the name, address, and nature of business of the "employer". (If the "employee" is a firm [such as a law firm or public relations firm], partners and salaried staff members of such firm may join in filing a Report as an "employee".)

(ii) "Employer".—To file as an "employer", write "None" in answer to Item "B".

(b) SEPARATE REPORTS. An agent or employee should not attempt to combine his Report with the employer's Report:

(i) Employers subject to the Act must file separate Reports and are not relieved of this requirement merely because Reports are filed by their agents or employees.

(ii) Employees subject to the Act must file separate Reports and are not relieved of this requirement merely because Reports are filed by their employers.

A. ORGANIZATION OR INDIVIDUAL FILING:

1. State name, address, and nature of business.

2. If this Report is for an Employer, list names of agents or employees who will file Reports for this Quarter.

☐ CHECK IF ADDRESS IS DIFFERENT THAN PREVIOUSLY REPORTED

NOTE on ITEM "B".—Reports by Agents or Employees. An employee is to file, each quarter, as many Reports as he has employers, except that: (a) If a particular undertaking is jointly financed by a group of employers, the group is to be considered as one employer, but all members of the group are to be named, and the contribution of each member is to be specified; (b) if the work is done in the interest of one person but payment therefor is made by another, a single Report—naming both persons as "employers"—is to be filed each quarter.

B. EMPLOYER—State name, address, and nature of business. If there is no employer, write "None."

NOTE on ITEM "C".—(a) The expression "in connection with legislative interests," as used in this Report, means "in connection with attempting, directly or indirectly, to influence the passage or defeat of legislation." "The term 'legislation' means bills, resolutions, amendments, nominations, and other matters pending or proposed in either House of Congress, and includes any other matter which may be the subject of action by either House"—§ 302(e).

(b) Before undertaking any activities in connection with legislative interests, organizations and individuals subject to the Lobbying Act are required to file a "Preliminary" Report (Registration).

(c) After beginning such activities, they must file a "Quarterly" Report at the end of each calendar quarter in which they have either received or expended anything of value in connection with legislative interests.

C. LEGISLATIVE INTERESTS, AND PUBLICATIONS in connection therewith:

1. State approximately how long legislative interests are to continue. If receipts and expenditures in connection with legislative interests have ☐ terminated, place an "X" in the box at the left, so that this Office will no longer expect to receive Reports.

2. State the general legislative interests of the person filing and set forth the specific legislative interests by reciting: (a) Short titles of statutes and bills; (b) House and Senate numbers of bills, where known; (c) citations of statutes, where known; (d) whether for or against such statutes and bills.

3. In the case of those publications which the person filing has caused to be issued or distributed in connection with legislative interests, set forth: (a) description, (b) quantity distributed, (c) date of distribution, (d) name of printer or publisher (if publications were paid for by person filing) or name of donor (if publications were received as a gift).

4. If this is a "Preliminary" Report (Registration) rather than a "Quarterly" Report, state below what the nature and amount of anticipated expenses will be; and, if for an agent or employee, state also what the daily, monthly, or annual rate of compensation is to be. If this is a "Quarterly" Report, disregard this item "C4" and fill out items "D" and "E" on the back of this page. Do not attempt to combine a "Preliminary" Report (Registration) with a "Quarterly Report."

(ii) "Employer".—To file as an "employer", write "None" in answer to Item "B".

(b) SEPARATE REPORTS. An agent or employee should not attempt to combine his Report with the employer's Report:

(i) Employers subject to the Act must file separate Reports and are not relieved of this requirement merely because Reports are filed by their agents or employees.

(ii) Employees subject to the Act must file separate Reports and are not relieved of this requirement merely because Reports are filed by their employers.

A. ORGANIZATION OR INDIVIDUAL FILING:

1. State name, address, and nature of business.

2. If this Report is for an Employer, list names of agents or employees who will file Reports for this Quarter.

☐ CHECK IF ADDRESS IS DIFFERENT THAN PREVIOUSLY REPORTED

NOTE on ITEM "B".—Reports by Agents or Employees. An employee is to file, each quarter, as many Reports as he has employers, except that: (a) If a particular undertaking is jointly financed by a group of employers, the group is to be considered as one employer, but all members of the group are to be named, and the contribution of each member is to be specified; (b) if the work is done in the interest of one person but payment therefor is made by another, a single Report—naming both persons as "employers"—is to be filed each quarter.

B. EMPLOYER—State name, address, and nature of business. If there is no employer, write "None."

NOTE on ITEM "C".—(a) The expression "in connection with legislative interests," as used in this Report, means "in connection with attempting, directly or indirectly, to influence the passage or defeat of legislation." "The term 'legislation' means bills, resolutions, amendments, nominations, and other matters pending or proposed in either House of Congress, and includes any other matter which may be the subject of action by either House"—§ 302(e).

(b) Before undertaking any activities in connection with legislative interests, organizations and individuals subject to the Lobbying Act are required to file a "Preliminary" Report (Registration).

(c) After beginning such activities, they must file a "Quarterly" Report at the end of each calendar quarter in which they have either received or expended anything of value in connection with legislative interests.

C. LEGISLATIVE INTERESTS, AND PUBLICATIONS in connection therewith:

1. State approximately how long legislative interests are to continue. If receipts and expenditures in connection with legislative interests have ☐ terminated, place an "X" in the box at the left, so that this Office will no longer expect to receive Reports.

2. State the general legislative interests of the person filing and set forth the specific legislative interests by reciting: (a) Short titles of statutes and bills; (b) House and Senate numbers of bills, where known; (c) citations of statutes, where known; (d) whether for or against such statutes and bills.

3. In the case of those publications which the person filing has caused to be issued or distributed in connection with legislative interests, set forth: (a) description, (b) quantity distributed, (c) date of distribution, (d) name of printer or publisher (if publications were paid for by person filing) or name of donor (if publications were received as a gift).

(Answer items 1, 2, and 3 in the space below. Attach additional pages if more space is needed.)

4. If this is a "Preliminary" Report (Registration) rather than a "Quarterly" Report, state below what the nature and amount of anticipated expenses will be; and, if for an agent or employee, state also what the daily, monthly, or annual rate of compensation is to be. If this is a "Quarterly" Report, disregard this item "C4" and fill out items "D" and "E" on the back of this page. Do not attempt to combine a "Preliminary" Report (Registration) with a "Quarterly Report."

STATEMENT OF VERIFICATION

[Omitted in printing]

NOTE on ITEM "D."—(a) IN GENERAL. The term "contribution" includes anything of value. When an organization or individual uses printed or duplicated matter in a campaign attempting to influence legislation, money received by such organization or individual—for such printed or duplicated matter—is a "contribution." "The term 'contribution' includes a gift, subscription, loan, advance, or deposit of money, or anything of value, and includes a contract, promise, or agreement, whether or not legally enforceable, to make a contribution"—§ 302(a) of the Lobbying Act.

(b) IF THIS REPORT IS FOR AN EMPLOYER.—(i) In general. Item "D" is designed for the reporting of all receipts from which expenditures are made, or will be made, in connection with legislative interests.

(ii) Receipts of Business Firms and Individuals.—A business firm (or individual) which is subject to the Lobbying Act by reason of expenditures which it makes in attempting to influence legislation—but which has no funds to expend except those which are available in the ordinary course of operating a business not connected in any way with the influencing of legislation—will have no receipts to report, even though it does have expenditures to report.

(iii) Receipts of Multi-purpose Organizations.—Some organizations do not receive any funds which are to be expended solely for the purpose of attempting to influence legislation. Such organizations make such expenditures out of a general fund raised by dues, assessments, or other contributions. The percentage of the general fund which is used for such expenditures indicates the percentage of dues, assessments, or other contributions which may be considered to have been paid for that purpose. Therefore, in reporting receipts, such organizations may specify what that percentage is, and report their dues, assessments, and other contributions on that basis. However, each contributor of $500 or more is to be listed, regardless of whether the contribution was made solely for legislative purposes.

(c) IF THIS REPORT IS FOR AN AGENT OR EMPLOYEE.—(i) In general. In the case of many employees, all receipts will come under Items "D 5" (received for services) and "D 12" (expense money and reimbursements). In the absence of a clear statement to the contrary, it will be presumed that your employer is to reimburse you for all expenditures which you make in connection with legislative interests.

(ii) Employer as Contributor of $500 or More.—When your contribution from your employer (in the form of salary, fee, etc.) amounts to $500 or more, it is not necessary to report such contribution under "D 13" and "D 14," since the amount has already been reported under "D 5," and the name of the "employer" has been given under Item "B" on page 1 of this report.
